5000 Stage Blockade Protest in West Berlin

3 American Cars Are Turned Back; 'Cold Communist Cynicism' Flayed

Berlin, July 18 (AP).—Five thousand defiant Berliners demonstrated today against the Russian land blockade while the world waited for the Western powers to make the next move in the month-old crisis.

Massed in a square in the U. S. sector, the throng roared approval as speakers denounced the "cold cynicism of communism that blockades innocent women and children."

Overhead, the U. S.-British aerial supply fleet rounded out a busy 24 hours which saw 493 planes land with food and fuel for the 2,400,000 western Berliners.

[There were no signs of any aerial celebration of Soviet Aviation Day near the Berlin corridors today, according to the United Press. American and British pilots also reported that the Russians' announced plans for night flying had not amounted to much.—Editor's note.]

Lack Travel Orders

At Helmstedt, 120 miles to the west, American travelers reported Russians were turning back westbound cars lacking Russian travel orders. Three American cars had to make the trip back to Berlin today, but three others inexplicably were passed by the Russian sentries.

Meanwhile, the three Western military governors called a special meeting for Monday to discuss the crisis, which broke exactly one month ago today in swift Soviet reaction to western Germany's currency reform.

There were reports the French, British and American governments were planning new, stiffer notes to Russia. Unlike the first, which the Russians turned down, these might embody threats of reprisal sanctions unless the blockade is lifted at a set time.

Such measures might include depriving Russian ships of the use of waterways under British and American control in other parts of the world. Or Russian shipping might be frozen in far away harbors for "technical difficulties," the reason the Russians gave for closing down the lone rail line from the west to Berlin.

The rally in the American sector was sponsored by west Berlin cultural and student organizations and was addressed by various authors, actors, editors and student leaders.

Red Air Force Chief Calls for More Planes

Moscow July 18 (U.P.).—The commander in chief of Russia's air force today called for more planes and armaments to counter the "intrigues of international reaction."

A big air show, scheduled in connection with the celebration of Soviet Air Forces Day, was postponed until next Sunday because of rain and limited visibility, but Marshal Konstantine Andreivitch Vershinin, air force chief, prepared a message for the Soviet people.

"Without fear," he said "the Soviet people can put their faith in the Soviet army and aviation." He said the Russian air fleet was rapidly developing high-speed jet aircraft, multi-engined planes and the use of radar for all-weather flying.

Coincident with Vershinin's appeal for more planes and armaments, the Soviet Planning Commission issued its quarterly report which showed production booming and harvest prospects excellent.

Nearly a fourth of Vershinin's message was devoted to denials of British and American claims that Pershing Lies in State in the Capitol . . .

U. S. Determined to Stay

War Won't Start in Berlin Unless the Russians Want It

By J. R. Wiggins
Post Reporter

World War III will not start in Berlin unless Soviet Russia starts it.

The United States is determined to carry out its obligations to feed and supply the western sectors of Berlin and it will not be dissuaded from the fulfillment of its duties and the exercise of its rights by threats of any kind. At the same time, it will continue to seek a peaceful solution of the Berlin crisis and will not engage in any acts of provocation or retaliation.

At the State Department Sunday, Secretary of State George Marshall and his aides continued at work studying and exploring every avenue and alternative by which the nations might arrive at an orderly and peaceful settlement of the Berlin impasse and of the whole German situation, of which it is a part.

The State Department is proceeding in the fullest confidence that its determination to stay in Berlin has the overwhelming support of American public opinion. It is going forward in a search for some alternative to a military solution.

The activity now under way in the austere, high-ceilinged, modernistic offices of the severe, utilitarian building on Virginia ave. resembles the concentration of effort

France's Dilemma

France, with a strong Communist Party and a troublesome internal situation, has followed the United States and Britain in all moves so far regarding Russia but is naturally reluctant to commit herself to strong action.

The conference is the regular quarterly meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the five countries which signed last March the Brussels "Western European Union" alliance against the encroachment of communism. The five countries now seek American military aid to carry out their pact.

The first meeting at 9:30 a. m. Monday will be open to the press for the first formalities, but the real work will be done in closed sessions.

Problems on the "Western Union" itself to be considered are:

Berlin Crisis To Be Topic Of 5 Nations

First Discussion Planned Today by European Union

The Hague, Netherlands, July 18 (U.P.).—Britain and France will consult Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg for the first time on the Berlin crisis Monday at a secret conference here of the Foreign Ministers of the five nations.

It is understood that Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin will seek the full support of France, as well as the Benelux countries, in United States-British plans to solve the Berlin crisis either in negotiations or in a showdown.

The conference also will provide the first direct talk between Bevin and French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault on the crisis.

Population Gain Outdistanced by Rise in Drinking

By The Associated Press

Liquor consumption has grown faster than population ever since repeal in 1933, the Treasury reported last night.

Furthermore, it said, spending on whisky has risen more than the general income level since the war began.

It backed up the spending assertion with the statement that of every $100 left to consumers after taxes, $3.50 was spent on whisky in 1946 compared with $2.20 in prewar 1939.

These observations were made in a 100-page Treasury analysis of Federal taxes on alcoholic beverages.

The Treasury made no recommendations for modifications.

Schuman Rule Faces Crisis In Paris Today

Vote of Confidence Scheduled on Refusal To Slash Army Funds

Paris, July 18 (U.P.).—Premier Robert Schuman's coalition government will stand or fall Monday on its refusal to slash funds for the French army.

Political observers said today the outcome of the confidence vote to be taken in the National Assembly Monday afternoon seemed to be a tossup. The Schuman government appears to be in its greatest danger since it took office eight months ago, these sources said.

Socialists and Radicals were lined up against the government in demanding a 40-million-dollar cut in the armed forces budget of $1,030,000,000. The Communists were sure to support them.

The government's chief hope lay in reaching a compromise with the Socialists today. Schuman previously had agreed to cut the army budget by 30 million dollars. But the Socialists refused to accept that figure.

Tied in with the budget issue was a personal attack on Pierre Henri Teitgen, Popular Republican armed forces minister. His opponents accused him of laxity in organizing the weak, ill-equipped French army.

Some political writers speculated that the tense situation in Berlin might make the Socialists hesitate to overthrow the government now.

The government also was busy trying to end the civil service strike which has hampered its administration for 10 days. Customs agents went back to work over the weekend and the holiday was over for tourists, black marketeers and smugglers who had carried contraband across the frontiers duty-free for a week.

3 Slain in Strike

Snipers Fire On Cortege In Italian City

Rome, July 18 (U.P.).—Snipers with rifles and automatic weapons fired at Siena today on the funeral procession for three policemen slain when they tried to defend the Abbadia-San Salvatore electric power substation during last week's general strike and violence.

An undetermined number of persons was injured by the bullets.

Telephone and telegraph communications between Siena and Florence were severed.

Troops were reported to have surrounded Siena, an ancient Tuscan town of more than 48,000, to check every one entering or leaving.

In Rome, the condition of Palmiro Togliatti, gravely wounded head of Italy's Communist Party, was unchanged today. A medical bulletin said:

"The night passed rather quietly without any noteworthy event. Temperature, pulse, breathing and blood pressure were unchanged."

It was signed by three physicians who have attended Togliatti since he was struck down by bullets fired by a Sicilian law student as he left Parliament Wednesday.

Yugoslavia Seeks Oil From Anglo-Americans

By the United Press

Diplomatic sources reported yesterday that Yugoslavia is seeking to buy oil from the west because of a sales boycott by the Soviet satellites, Romania and Albania.

Before Marshall Tito's row with the Kremlin, Yugoslavia got its oil from the Soviet Union.

The informants said Yugoslavia now has "approached" agents of Anglo-American Near East oil interests at Trieste in an effort to strike a deal. Yugoslavia was said to have offered to pay for the oil from her scarce supply of available dollars.

The Washington Post Poll

Area Democrats Lose Strength As Other Forces Show Gains

Democrats have retained a slight edge over Republicans in the Washington area, but both Democrats and Republicans are outnumbered by "independent" voters.

These facts were revealed by a report of The Washington Post Poll that was completed just before the major party conventions. Shifts in sentiment occasioned by the nominations and adoption of party platforms are not recorded.

Comparing the report with a survey by The Washington Post Poll made in June 1947, showed that the number of "independents" has increased, while the Democrats have lost considerable support. The Republicans have made a slight gain in the year, as have third party adherents.

Listed as "independent" voters were those who said that political preference would depend on the candidates selected, and those who were undecided at the time the survey was made.

Of course, for many citizens of Washington and suburbs, the question of how they would vote is an academic one. Only 46 per cent (33 per cent in the District) report that they will be eligible to vote in the fall elections, and 10 per cent of these doubt that they will be able to exercise their right.

Findings of The Washington Post Poll are based on interviews with a representative cross-section of adults living in the District and nearby suburbs of Maryland and Virginia.

Local residents were asked:

"Are you qualified to vote in the next presidential election?"

(If "Yes") "As far as you can tell now, will you vote in the next presidential election, or won't you be able to?"

Replies were as follows:

	All Gr'ps	D. C.	Md.	Va.
Qualified to vote	46%	33%	76%	67%
Expect to vote	36	21	73	57
Doubt they will vote	10	12	3	10
Not qualified to vote	51	63	21	29
Not sure	3	4	3	4

Double Tragedy in Hunting Creek

Alexandria Boy, 10, Drowns Trying to Save Brother, 8

A 10-year-old Alexandria boy was drowned yesterday in a futile effort to save the life of his 8-year-old brother as the younger lad sank in Hunting Creek near Mount Vernon blvd. adjacent to Fairfax County.

First reports were fragmentary as police dragged the creek area starting at about 6 p. m. They identified the boys as Exsell Watkins, 8, and Ben, 10, said to live in the 600 block of S. Columbus st.

One report said the younger boy cried out as a strong undercurrent carried him downstream. The other lad plunged into the creek in a rescue effort only to be carried beneath the surface also.

Scores of motorists and picnickers, crowding the area in an effort to escape the 91-degree heat, watched grappling operations.

Weatherman Promises Some Relief Today

Washington sweltered yesterday under a merciless sun which raised the mercury to 91 degrees at 4:50 o'clock, but relief was promised for today.

The weatherman guaranteed no winds to cool fevered brows, but he did say a high of only 85 is expected. Humidity, too, should be lower, he declared.

As for yesterday, relief was sought in sundry ways.

Approximately 38,000 wandered about the zoo getting a vicarious pleasure from watching the polar

Thousands Pay Tribute To Pershing

4000 Still in Line To View Remains At 9 P. M. Closing Of Capitol Rotunda

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Gen. John J. Pershing received a reverent farewell from thousands of fellow citizens yesterday as he lay in state at the Capitol of the Nation he served so well.

While solemn hundreds moved slowly, patiently in the blazing sun outside the east entrance to the Capitol, President Truman entered from the west, slipping almost unnoticed through a basement door. Striding across the stone floor, Mr. Truman stepped up on the catafalque.

For a long minute the President stood looking into the face of the great soldier who had commanded him in France when the Chief Executive was captain of Battery D, 149th Field Artillery. Then the President stepped down, head bowed, and walked slowly back the way he had come.

Marshall Visibly Affected

Secretary of State George C. Marshall, a member of General Pershing's staff during the war and his aide afterward, was visibly affected when he looked for the last time on the man who had been not only his commander but his friend.

Other high State officials as well as dignitaries from other lands came to pay tribute.

When Capitol police closed the doors a few minutes after 9 p. m., an estimated 4000 persons were still in line to view the body.

When the doors were opened to the public, just before 3 p. m. two lines already had formed, stretching from the Capitol steps back across the park to the Library of Congress. In them, subdued and reverent, were men, women, soldiers, civilians and veterans—especially veterans.

Veterans Pay Respects

Many of these, in overseas caps of veterans' organizations had been sent by the general's orders into battle. Yesterday, they came to look their last time upon their old commander.

Earlier, the casket, draped in the Stars and Stripes under which General Pershing served actively more than 40 years, was borne to the Capitol rotunda from Walter Reed Hospital, where the general died at the age of 87 Thursday. The hearse which carried it was preceded by a formation of armored scout cars, bristling with weapons and radio antennae.

The General's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Warren Pershing, and his sister, Miss May Pershing, followed the military procession. With them were Gen. Charles G. Dawes (ret.), former Vice President and General Pershing's war-time purchasing agent, and Col. J. C. O'Laughlin (ret.), editor of the Army and Navy Journal and a close friend of General Pershing.

The procession was met at the Capitol by a group headed by General Marshall, Army Secretary Kenneth A. Royall, Navy Secre-

Impounded U. S. Plane Takes Off; Lands in Azores

Halifax, Nova Scotia, July 18 (AP). The Royal Canadian Air Force said today a Flying Fortress ordered back to the United States had landed in the Azores Islands.

The RCAF and Pilot Irwin R. Schindler of Miami, Fla., had given it a flight plan to Boston before his takeoff.

The airplane was impounded here a week ago by customs officials after reports that the nine men aboard were headed for Palestine to join the Israeli air force.

RCAF officials said the flight to the Azores was a brilliant piece of flying since the plane did not carry a full load of gas and had to make the 2035-mile flight at reduced speed. One engine cowling was missing.

Non-Union Host, Too

Third Round of Pay Boosts Won by 10 Million Workers

By The Associated Press

More than 10 million members of labor unions have won a third round of postwar wage increases, Government officials estimated privately yesterday.

These officials, familiar with the wage situation, said about three-fourths of the approximately 15 million American workers who belong to labor unions have received third-round pay boosts. That figures to about 10 million to 12 million.

Millions of nonunion workers have received third-round hikes, too. But the experts say these are scattered and the figures are too incomplete to make an estimate.

The third-round exceptions include railroad workers, numbering 1,250,000 who only recently completed their second round, calling for a 15½-cent hourly increase.

The third round hasn't spread, either, to vast numbers of white-collar workers.

Also, in a number of industries the wage problem was postponed temporarily to see what happened in other industries. The telephone industry is one of these.

The biggest current third round wage argument is between the Ford Motor Co., and the CIO auto workers with a strike threatening.

Altogether there are 52 million workers in jobs outside agriculture who help make up the record 61,300,000 employment total for the United States.

In amount the third round is averaging out at between 10 and 15 cents an hour; close to 12½. The first round in 1946 ran about 18 cents an hour; the second in 1947 about 13 cents.

Aid, Arms Costly

U. S. Heading For Deficit, Snyder Says

By the United Press

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder said yesterday that the Government "probably" will wind up with a deficit at the end of the current fiscal year.

It was the first public statement by a high fiscal officer that the Government may be forced to operate in the red during the 12 months that began July 1.

Snyder's statement was contained in a letter to Joseph M. Dodge, president of the American Bankers Association, urging that banks redouble their efforts to control inflationary pressures.

He noted that the Truman Administration closed its books on the fiscal year ended June 30 with a surplus of $8,400,000,000.

"On the other hand, in the fiscal year just commencing, as a result of increased defense and foreign-aid expenditures—combined with the recent tax cut—we shall probably be unable to avoid an actual excess of expenditures over receipts," he asserted.

During the last session of Congress, GOP leaders repeatedly warned their colleagues to make deeper cuts in Government spending to keep the Government in the black. They assailed Democratic administrations for deficit financing and "unbalanced budgets."

Snyder said the Government's changed financial status will prevent it from retiring portions of the public debt held by banks on the scale maintained during the past fiscal year.

Dixiecrats Make South's Vote Uncertain

Sen. McClellan Thinks Half Dozen States May Desert Truman

By The Associated Press

The entrance of a "Dixiecrat ticket" into the presidential field brought a disputed prediction yesterday that President Truman may lose the support of up to six Southern States in the November election.

Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) told a reporter he thinks the Southern Democratic rebel ticket may help take the electoral votes of a half dozen Southern States away from President Truman and Senator Alben Barkley, his running mate.

The new ticket—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina for President and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi for Vice President—was put forth at Birmingham Saturday as one Dixie answer to the President's civil rights program.

States Are Listed

McClellan — who fought the President's nomination but did not walk out of the Democratic convention—named Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Tennessee as possible participants in a bolt he said is almost certain to result in the regular Democratic Party's defeat in the presidential election.

He put Tennessee in the list, McClellan said, because of a sharp local division among Democrats there.

He said that if the Thurmond-Wright ticket gets on the ballot in Arkansas it may split the Democratic vote in his home State and

Ford Employes Vote for Strike

Detroit, July 18 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers announced today that Ford Motor Co. workers have voted "overwhelmingly" in favor of a strike at Ford's 46 plants across the country.

Kenneth Bannon, director of the UAW Ford department, said that "with returns in from all but a couple of locals, the vote is about 98 per cent in favor of a strike."

He said specific figures could not be prepared before Monday.

Arab States Bow to U. N. Truce Order In Holy Land

Halt to Jewish Immigration Among Three Conditions Demanded in Truce

Cairo, July 18 (AP).—The Arab countries today accepted a United Nations truce order and instructed their troops to stop fighting in Palestine. The Israeli government previously had agreed to the truce.

Abdul Rahman Azzam Pasha, secretary-general of the seven-nation Arab League, notified the U. N. its cease-fire had been accepted. But he placed three conditions on the new truce.

1. Jewish immigration must be completely stopped during the truce.

2. Palestinian Arab refugees must be allowed to return to their homes.

3. A definite time must be set on the truce. It must not be for an indefinite period.

Three States Act Separately

Besides the League reply, three of the Arab states—Egypt, Trans-Jordan and Syria—cabled separate acceptances of the truce to U. N. mediator Count Folke Bernadotte's headquarters in Rhodes.

U. N. staff members in Rhodes regarded as significant the fact that the three Arab states whose armies have been most active in Palestine agreed to the truce without waiting for the final decision

Abdullah Alone Faces Mob, Disperses It

Amman, Trans-Jordan, July 18 (AP).—King Abdullah, armed only with a silver dagger, stood alone in a courtyard today and faced a mob of 1000 civilians who had marched on the royal palace in protest against the Palestine truce.

Spurning an escort, Abdullah walked into the courtyard to face his people again. As they stood in silence, he said:

"Why do you disturb the rest of a devout Moslem in the heat of the day during Ramadan? (Annual Mohammedan 30-day fast). How many among you are from Palestine and why are you not enrolled in the ranks of the army instead of a mob? My Arab Legion defended Palestine long before any other Arab army set foot in the land. Trans-Jordan is my heart, and my mission is to help save both Trans-Jordan and Palestine."

The king's words scattered and dispersed the mob.

Banks Warned On Excessive Realty Loans

By the United Press

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation quietly suggested yesterday that banks had better be careful about tying up so much of their money in long-term real estate loans.

The caution signal was flashd by FDIC Chairman Maple T. Harl at the end of a long report showing that real estate loans of insured commercial banks were doubled in the two-year period ending December 31, 1947.

He said banks had $9,270,649,000—6 per cent of their total assets—invested in real estate loans at the end of last year. By comparison, only 3 per cent of bank assets were so invested in 1945.

Harl pointed out that "about half" of the outstanding loans "have been made during a period of high prices."

"Since real estate loans are made for relatively long periods of time a decline in prices and business activity may affect the quality of such loans," he said. "The continued rise in the amount of real estate loans held by insured commercial banks and their increase in importance in the bank asset picture indicates the necessity for caution."

Harl added, however, that "the risk of future losses to the banks . . . is lessened" by the fact that about two-fifths of the outstanding real estate loans are covered by some form of Government guarantee or insurance. (For example, veterans housing loans under the GI bill of rights.)

U.S. Bombers Reach Bases in England

Associated Press Map

SUITABLE—Map locates airfields at Scampton, Waddington and Marham in England. U. S. B-29s landed here Saturday, using the long runways of these three airfields. They are in the flatlands from which the Eighth Air Force mounted its World War II attacks against Germany

London, July 18 (U.P.)—Fifty-eight of the 60 American Superfortresses and all five C-54 Skymasters that will be based "temporarily" at three RAF bomber bases had arrived in England late today or were winging in over the North Atlantic.

Fifty-six B-29's were here.

The British Air Ministry said it had received no take-off information on two B-29's of the Twenty-eighth Medium Bomb Group flying to Scampton Airdrome by way of Goose Bay, Labrador. It said two others of the Twenty-eighth were in flight and expected at Scampton tonight.

Twenty-six bombers of the Twenty-eighth group were lined up neatly on the parking strips beside Scampton's main 4500-foot runway.

The 307th Bomber Group from MacDill Field, Fla., had all its 30 Superforts down, 20 at the "secret" Marham base and 10 at Waddington.

British Sunday newspapers squandered precious newsprint with picture layouts on the arriving airmen.

Americans Kept on Bases

The Sunday Pictorial gave prominent position to a picture of the crew of the "Early Bird" holding aloft a British WAAF (Women's branch of the RAF).

None of the Americans were allowed off their bases yesterday. They were restricted until their commander, Col. Stanley Wray of Muncie, Ind., arrives from United States Air Force headquarters in Germany.

Wray will brief the men on training activities in England and their practice missions over Germany, full details of which have not been released.

Briton Finds 200 Crewmen Red Prisoners

Berlin, July 18 (U.P.)—A British official who entered the Soviet occupation zone to investigate the detention of 200 crewmen on British barges declared today they were prisoners on their boats.

The Russians, he said, had not allowed food supplies to be sent aboard their barges at any time during their three-week detention, nor were the crewmen allowed to leave.

The officer himself reported he was under Soviet arrest for three days and fed only black bread and water.

John James Simms, senior official of the inland water transport branch of the military government, left Hamburg July 12 to learn what had happened to the crews of the 30 British food barges held by the Russians since June 24.

Unable to see Soviet Commander Major Etzeff at Wittenberg—the major was reported in Berlin—Simms was given a "cordial reception" by the second in command. Simms said the deputy asked him to go to Perleberg to meet a Major Sveff. There Simms asked for an interzonal pass.

Simms reported the Russians promptly threw him into an unlighted, unfurnished cell. He said he was not permitted to wash and had to sleep on the floor.

Last Friday, the Russians put Simms in a truck and drove him to Berlin where, in the Soviet command building, he was searched and, yesterday afternoon, finally released.

mayoress, was cheered wildly as she made her way to the speakers' stand. She concluded a short speech:

"Thank you for raising your voices in this hour of our need, which is singular in the history of the world. Berlin fights for Germany. Germany will not desert Berlin. Berlin fights for the world."

German Reds Denounced

Walter Karsch, an editor, denounced German Communists who, he said, "kept silent and failed to protest the kidnapings of Berliners and who are now silent over this cruel blockade which is attempting to starve two million of their countrymen into submission.

The Russian-controlled press took the line today that the French were supposed to be willing to accept the Soviet suggestion of new four-power talks on Germany, but the United States was "pressuring France against talk."

Taegliche Rundschau, organ of the Soviet military administration, also carried a long blast against the "cold annexation of the Ruhr," claiming it was snatched from the Germans to work for the European Recovery Program.

Col. J. T. Duke of Morganza, Md., personnel director for the United States Office of Military Government, reported a Soviet commissar at Helmstedt was turning back westbound cars.

"A Russian lieutenant was ready to pass us when the commissar, a youth in civilian clothes, gave him the order to send us back," Duke said. "He told us to come back tomorrow with a Soviet stamp on our travel orders and we would go through immediately."

Duke was riding with R. M. Barnett of Chevy Chase, Md., director of civilian personnel, who was on his way to Frankfurt with his wife and daughter.

The Russians, through their press, announced more than a week ago that westbound Allied travelers would need Soviet permits to get through but did not begin putting the order into effect until this weekend.

Allied authorities rejected such a measure, which would place Allied nationals under Soviet jurisdiction.

and study that preceded the July 9 note protesting the Berlin blockade. Then the Secretary and his staff labored throughout the preceding weekend, exchanging views with other Western powers, considering every angle and aspect of the strange crisis induced by the arbitrary obstruction of access to Berlin.

Another note to Soviet Russia, in response to the abrupt Soviet reply of July 15, clearly is to be expected. The inevitability of armed conflict has not been acknowledged at the State Department. Hopes of an agreement acceptable to Soviet Russia still are entertained. The note of July 14, it is believed, left open several things that might be explored profitably.

Such diplomatic exchanges as have taken place highlight the difficulties of this kind of negotiation with a group of Western democratic powers on one side and a single centralized government on the other side. The Russians can move swiftly with their declarations. The response from the Western powers has to be painfully and patiently developed among all the foreign offices.

The diplomatic phases of the struggle are by no means at an end. It might be said more accurately that they are at a beginning. Before the resources of diplomacy have been exhausted, there will be a record of purpose, wish and intent so clear that the Western will for peace will be unmistakable. It is going to be made plain to the world that the United States and the powers associated with it are not to blame for any resort to force that might arise out of this crisis.

Situation Admittedly Serious

The immediate situation is acknowledged to be most serious and grim. The impression picked up at the State Department, however, is that the tension is not necessarily growing. Dispatches from Berlin Saturday conveyed the idea that there was a worsening of affairs and a mounting crisis. What is happening now, after all, is what has been happening for days and weeks. The air is filled with threats of military action, but so far the threats have not materialized. Actual interference with the airlift has not been stepped up. The atmosphere is the same as it has been—ominous, forbidding and threatening—but there is an absence of any definite act of provocation of offense. This is hopefully construed to mean that the way still is open for other than military action.

The whole attitude of Washington offices where officials are being kept close to desks by the foreign crisis is that there will be no outbreak of hostilities resulting from any ill-considered, irresponsible, provocative act by Western powers. There is a grim determination to supply Berlin. That will be accomplished as long as it is within the limits of our power. It will not be supplemented by agressive military steps on the scene or countering diplomatic thrusts against Russia elsewhere. The sort of reprisals urged by Maj. Gen. William Donovan do not seem to conform to the plan of action on which the Government now is embarked.

Berlin a Testing Spot

It is now more than ever realized that the Berlin issue is only a part of the larger issue of Germany, and of all Europe. It is just the testing spot. It is felt that the one sure thing about our policy is that we cannot leave Berlin. That step it is thought, would have to be repeated in Austria, Italy, Greece and in all Europe eventually. The urgent and unavoidable necessity of staying in Berlin has been accepted.

Any withdrawal at this time is completely out of the question. It would involve, not only the abandonment of the whole European Recovery Program but the surrender of all American influence and interest on the whole continent of Europe.

Soviet Russia has picked Berlin to strike at the recovery of Europe. It is known that the European Recovery Program has had a profound effect on Russian leaders. It is blamed for the adverse election in Italy, the election rebuff in Finland, the Communist reverses in France, the difficulties in Yugoslavia and in Czechoslovakia. It has become a vital Russian objective to cripple this program and Berlin has presented the best opportunity to strike decisively at the ECA in Germany and through the blow there, at the whole concept of European recovery through American aid.

War Up to Russians

The present attitude here would seem to preclude the kind of "Allied show of force" talked of in Frankfurt last night, by "authoritative sources" and described in the newspaper Stars and Stripes. It was reported there that the American State Department was holding exploratory talks with London and Paris on plans to send an armed convoy up the autobahn, or by rail, to Berlin. Such an effort, in view of the caution with which policy is being worked out at the State Department, would seem unlikely unless the way was prepared for it by the most exhaustive diplomatic effort, the most complete consultation with all powers, reference to the United Nations and resort to every other resource of statecraft.

The United States intends to supply western Berlin and to stay there in the exercise of its rights and fulfillment of its duties. It will exhaust every resource of diplomacy to achieve this purpose peacefully. It will take no provocative or offensive step to precipitate armed conflict. It will leave the choice of war or peace to Soviet Russia. There will be no war over Berlin unless the Russians want war. That seems to be the gist of the policy on which the State Department now is embarked.

Federation of Europe Due for Discussion

The Hague, July 18 (NYHT.).—For the first time in history, the idea of a federation of Europe will be discussed at an official international conference, when the five states that signed the 50-year Brussels Alliance meet here Monday.

Georges Bidault, French foreign minister, will put the question on the table before the foreign ministers of Britain, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg in the sense that it has been raised by individual members of the British House of Commons and the French National Assembly.

Specifically, he will ask for their views on the idea of a parliament for all Europe, made up of delegates from the European national parliaments. In most of the forms in which this has been presented before, the member states of the federation and their separate parliaments would have surrendered a certain amount of sovereignty to the union.

16 Jets Prepare For Iceland Hop

Narsarssuak, Greenland, July 18 (AP).—The pioneer transatlantic flight of 16 United States Air Force P-80 jet planes completed the second over-water hop of its trip to Germany today. They landed at an airfield of the Greenland Base Command, 508 miles from Narsarssuak on the island's east coast.

The sleek shooting stars are expected to take off again Monday for Meeks Field in Keflavik, Iceland.

With favorable weather, the jets and their three escort planes were expected to reach Odiham Field, near London, Monday night after a refueling stop in Scotland.

The jets landed at Narsarssuak yesterday afternoon. They covered the 776 miles between Goose Bay, Labrador, and Narsarssuak in 1 hour and 50 minutes.

Czech Spy Arrests Believed Tipoff to Political Purge

Prague, July 18 (U.P.).—The Czechoslovak people waited uneasily today for the long-feared government housecleaning of anti-Communists which is expected to sweep all opposition parties off the nation's political scene.

Many Czechs have predicted for weeks that the Communist government was planning a crackdown. The announcement last night of the arrest of 79 "misled" persons charged with espionage, terrorism and assassination under United States guidance was considered the tipoff that the drive had started.

Heading the list of those arrested was a former National Socialist Party official. Charges of organizing terrorist bands were filed against former members of Parliament and leading officials of the National Socialist Party and the Catholic Peoples Party. These parties were leaders of the anti-Communist bloc before the coup last February.

A month ago, the Interior Ministry announced plans to try 55 National Socialists for acts of espionage allegedly committed before the Communist coup. Thirteen others, headed by former Justice Minister Prokop Drtina, were slated for trial for their part in uncovering Communist arms stores in Olomouc last February.

Reliable reports circulating last week said the police themselves are being purged and a thorough housecleaning was said to be under way in the Ministry of Interior.

More Soviet Planes Asked

Western Allied planes played a decisive role in defeating the German air force.

Vershinin said that, in the final stages after victory was assured, the Western Allied air force did attack Germany, but these attacks, he said, "were mass attacks on workers' districts in Berlin, Dresden and other German cities, and on industrial objectives, the destruction of which corresponded to the interests of American monopolies and not to the completion of the military defeat of Germany."

The report of the planning commission said some branches of Soviet industry fell behind schedule during the past quarter, but that industry as a whole exceeded the production quota by 6 per cent. It said over-all production was up 24 per cent from last year.

3 Congress 'Watchdogs' Already in Europe

By The Associated Press

Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) disclosed yesterday that three Senate-House "watchdogs" already are in Europe to check on the European Recovery Program.

They are agents of the Joint Committee on Foreign Economic Cooperation which has been dubbed as the "watchdog" for Congress in the spending program.

Bridges announced through his office that Charles S. Dewey, agent general of the committee, will leave for Europe Wednesday to join the three agents already there.

New Randolph Draft Advice

New York, July 18 (AP).—A. Philip Randolph, national chairman of the League for Non-Violent Civil Disobedience Against Military Segregation, today urged Negro adults throughout the Nation not to accept positions on local selective service boards.

Randolph said in a statement:

"Negroes would serve no useful purpose by accepting invitations to become members of selective service boards under the Jim Crow draft act which Congress passed and President Truman signed.

"By serving as draft board members, Negroes would not be in a position to assure a draftee of equal and unsegregated treatment in the Army, and their very presence on a local board would tend to becloud the opposition to this racist law.

"Refusal to register and be inducted under this undemocratic law is one side of the coin of resistance. Refusal to serve on draft boards and to be a cog in the Jim Crow machinery of induction is the other side of the coin."

Randolph has repeatedly urged Negroes to refuse to register under the selective service law.

British Officer Killed Fighting Malay Rebels

Kuala Lumpur, Federation of Malaya, July 18 (AP).—A British officer was shot and killed today during a raid on a Chinese terrorist camp 35 miles south of Ipoh.

Officials said he was leading a battalion of Gurkhas when 20 to 30 insurgents were surprised in a jungle camp. One rebel was killed.

Marshall Plan

France Tops Countries Getting Aid

By the United Press

France became the No. 1 beneficiary of Marshall Plan aid as a result of purchases authorized last week by the Economic Cooperation Administration.

France also got the major share of last week's purchase authorizations according to a summary released yesterday by ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman.

Authorizations for the week totaled $26,562,534. That brought the over-all total under the foreign aid program so far to $815,477,224.

Britain, omitted from last week's authorizations because of a two-day delay in ratifying a bilateral aid agreement with the United States, got left out again and fell to second place. France has received purchase authorizations totaling $231,242,545. Britain has received $226,066,200 in authorizations.

Greece, the Netherlands and the French occupation zone of Germany received new purchase authorizations.

Hoffman is expected to announce country by country aid allotments for the current quarter at a news conference today. They will include new quotas for loans to Marshall Plan countries and new cash grants.

Chinese Reds Believed in Big Offensive

Nanking, July 18 (AP).—Chinese Communists dealt heavy blows to the government in central and northwest China today, leading neutral observers to believe they had at last abandoned hit-skip raids and begun a general offensive.

The Shansi Province capital of Taiyuan in the northwest was surrounded and under close attack; the Han River town of Siangyang, 400 miles south, was reported to have fallen, and the government's main central base of Suchow was closely threatened.

The independent Chen Li (Truth) News Agency, reported Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was personally directing the defense by radio and telephone from Nanking.

The same agency said reinforcements had arrived in Taiyuan by air. There was no further word concerning an official government report of Saturday that infantry reinforcements had made a junction with Taiyuan's garrison 20 miles to the south.

The Communists broadcast on Saturday that they had "annihilated" 10 divisions—possibly 200,000 men—around Taiyuan in the past month.

The Chen Li agency said the Communists had captured Siangyang in the central province of Hupeh. The military spokesman refused to admit this but acknowledged all communication with the garrison had ceased.

Scenes at Capitol as General Pershing's Body Lies in State

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

THOUSANDS STAND IN LINE FIVE AND SIX ABREAST FROM FIRST STREET TO THE CAPITOL STEPS AWAITING THEIR TURN TO PAY RESPECTS TO PERSHING

Thousands Pass in Tribute as Pershing Lies in State at Capitol

tary John L. Sullivan, Air Secretary W. Stewart Symington, Army Chief of Staff Omer N. Bradley and Deputy Chief of Staff J. Layton Collins.

Behind them were members of a congressional delegation who stood with the military leaders and members of the family as the Army Band—established by General Pershing and wearing the gray uniforms suggested by the general himself, slowly and softly played, "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

Infantrymen stood rigidly at salute as the bronze casket was carried up the long main steps of the east entrane to the Capitol.

Rites for Gen. Pershing

TODAY

9 a. m. to noon: Body lies in state in Rotunda. Open to public.

1:10 p. m.: Funeral procession begins from Capitol to Arlington National Cemetery.

Exercises in Amphitheater will follow for invited guests only. Services will then be held at graveside. The public may enter the cemetery, but on foot only. It is urged, however, that the public view the funeral procession along the route of march.

Four soldiers, a Marine, a sailor and an Air Force enlisted man placed the casket on the bier. One carefully adjusted the flag that covered it, and they marched away.

In the rotunda, the casket was placed reverently upon the catafalque, built of hand-hewn pine in 1865 to support Lincoln's casket.

Draped in black, it stood somber and alone under the subdued floodlights focused from the dome.

At its head stood two soldiers with bayonetted rifles and an officer at rigid attention, immobile and silent.

Honor Guard Salutes

An officer led in the first detail of the honor guard that will attend the body until it is buried in Arlington Cemetery today. As the guard saluted, Secretary Marshall and the military secretaries filed in, followed by the congressional delegation.

The Rotunda was hushed. From the sides and the upper tiers of the hall, the statues of honored statesmen looked down on the scene. Near the entrance, General of the Armies George Washington's marble effigy seemed to be watching the tribute to his modern-day successor.

Carpet of Red Roses

Near the foot of the catafalque, a carpet of red roses, fringed with ferns, stood upright, a vase of white carnations placed at the bottom. Ranged around the sides of the Rotunda were dozens of flowered wreaths and baskets of flowers, many of them from people whose names were not known to Army officials in charge.

Attending the President were Secretary Marshall, Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to the President, Secretary Royall, his military aides, and David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, who escorted the President from the rotunda through the north entrance.

It was then about 2:30 p. m. Just before the public was admitted, attendants ushered in Raymond Laurent, member of the French Chamber of Deputies and former Mayor of Paris, to the bier. Laurent welcomed General Pershing to Paris when the general last visited the French capital in 1936.

First in line of the thousands who waited in sun-baked East Capitol st., back as far as First st., was Amedeo Tomassetti, disabled veteran from Rochester, N. Y., who had seen service in France under General Pershing.

Before Tomassetti filed in, however, Lester W. Brent, Negro personal messenger for General Pershing for 19 years, was conducted into the rotunda. He went to the catafalque, stood with his hand on the casket rim and slowly shook his head as he looked at his dead chief's face.

Tomassetti, a chief warrant officer in the First World War, had also served in the Philippines insurrection when General Pershing was a captain. It was after this service and duty in Tokyo that President Theodore Roosevelt promoted Pershing from captain to brigadier general, over hundreds of senior officers, Tomassetti remarked.

There were other disabled veterans, some on crutches, who headed the line of people passing the bier at the rate of 25 to 30 a minute, from just before 3 p. m. to 9 p. m.

There was Alfred A. Rhoades, a trumpeter in the Thirty-second Division in France, now in business in Louisville, Ky. There was Anthony J. Sidlowski, a Navy veteran of the recent war, on crutches because of injuries received in the South Pacific. He had waited since 9 a. m.

Fourth in line was P. L. Moreland, 52-year-old veteran of General Pershing's war in France. His was the first Regular Army hospital unit to go overseas. It was stationed between headquarters and the front lines, and he remembered seeing General Pershing during the war.

Families in Line

There were families, like that of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Iak of Berwyn, Md., who had their 9-year-old daughter, Ruth, with them. The father, a Department of Agriculture employe at Beltsville, Md., explained that he served with various outfits in the AEF and highly admired General Pershing.

But mingled with the veterans of the First World War in the public line were thousands of others. They were like Miss Marie Searles of the All-States Hotel, for instance, who said simply, "Everyone thinks of General Pershing as one of the finest—a typical American leader."

More thousands are expected to view the remains of the hero of the first World War as he lies in state at the Capitol from 9 a. m. until noon today, prior to the procession and final rites to be held in Arlington Cemetery.

From Fort Meade, Md., from Fort Bragg, N. C., from Fort Belvoir, Va., and from the Military Academy at West Point, troops have been converging on the District to join Washington's own Third Infantry Regiment, the ceremonial outfit which is providing the military guards of honor for General Pershing.

3500 Troops in March

The Army Ground Forces Band from Fort Meade, and the Army Band from Fort Myer, will set the cadence for the column of 3500 troops and distinguished persons in the mighty procession which will take the body of the General of the Armies from the Capitol to the cemetery.

The marching columns, forming north of the Capitol on Constitution ave., will accompany the caisson bearing the general's casket, which will be drawn by six matched gray horses. The caisson will be followed by a caparisoned horse, traditionally marched only for generals or cavalrymen. It will be doubly appropriate, as General Pershing began his career as a cavalryman.

The procession along Constitution ave., which will march at 1:10 p. m. from the Capitol Plaza, will swing at the quick-time cadence of 120 paces a minute in the greatest funeral march since the Unknown Soldier, one of General Pershing's World War soldiers, was borne along the same route to the same resting place. Jet planes will salute overhead.

The marching men and the horse-drawn caisson with the general's body are expected to take an hour to reach the Memorial Gate of the cemetery, where they will reduce their pace to the traditional funeral slow-time of 100 paces a minute.

Thousands Expected

Thousands are expected to line Constitution ave. as the procession moves toward 23d st., Lincoln Memorial and the Memorial Bridge. Persons on foot may enter the cemetery, but officials pointed out that the area near the Amphitheater, where the final ceremony will be, is restricted to family members and invited guests.

The casket will pass near the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and after a minute of silence will be borne into the amphitheater. Following ceremonies there, General Pershing will be buried at 3 p. m. in the grassy slope overlooking the Potomac which he chose as the site of his grave years ago.

President Truman will attend the final services. With him will be former President Herbert Hoover, elder statesman Bernard Baruch and some 3000 other leaders and guests.

Sergt. Alvin C. York, outstanding World War I hero, telegraphed from Jamestown, Tenn., last night that he would be unable to accept Secretary of Defense James Forrestal's invitation to the funeral because of ill health.

Home Town Holds Memorial Service

Laclede, Mo., July 18 (AP).—Gen. John J. Pershing's home town held memorial services today in the little Methodist Church he attended as a boy.

The Rev. F. H. Mittendorf selected as his theme: "By the good hand of our God upon, they brought us a man of understanding."

"We mourn the disappearance of a truly great man from public life," said the minister.

George Anderson, 85, who attended Sunday school with the general, was present.

Buffalo Girls to Show Lip Reading Technique

Five small Buffalo, N. Y., girls will give a lip-reading demonstration at a meeting of the Institute for the Preparation of Training Teachers for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing July 28 in McMahon Hall at Catholic University.

The public is invited to attend the session, which will begin at 7:30 p. m.

bears frisking in their ice-cooled bath.

Other thousands emulated the bears at Maryland beach resorts, at country clubs and at pools such as the one at Glen Echo amusement park, where divers followed each other into the water with monotonous regularity like gadgets on an assembly line.

The sandwich-potato salad-hard-boiled egg set were out in full force at Rock Creek Park picnic areas with a number of fraternal lodges sponsoring outdoor get-togethers.

Light Diet Advices

Meanwhile, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health officer, whose warm weather advice to the public stresses light diet and "taking things easy," yesterday admitted breaking one of his own rules. He spent a portion of the day working on some official problems.

But the dietary prescription was followed to the letter by the physician.

Grapefruit, boiled eggs and coffee for breakfast; sandwhich and coffee for lunch and " a light dinner. I don't know yet what its going to be—but it'll be light."

Hot as yesterday was—with an average temperature of 82—4 degrees above normal it was refreshing compared to the record 103 average reading on July 18, 1887.

Meanwhile, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death in the drowning of Junior Foster, 16, of 331 16th st. se. The boy, who could not swim, disappeared in 25 to 40 feet of water in the Eastern Branch of the Anacostia River near Gallinger Hospital's power plant Saturday afternoon. Harbor police recovered his body yesterday.

U. S. Farmers Glum As Prices Decrease

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The American farmer, for several years accustomed to seeing his products lead the parade to higher prices, is now watching his prices go down while prices of things he buys go up.

Outside of meat, most prices of the more important farm crops have started down. The huge crop of wheat now being harvested has depressed that grain until Saturday contracts for delivery this month were being sold at Chicago well under the Government price support level.

Corn also has gone down, influenced by the Government estimate of an all-time record crop this fall.

Hog Raising Improves

But as corn has gone down and livestock has gone up, the prospects for a steadily diminishing supply of meat are changing. The corn-hog ratio, that got down to 8 to 1, has climbed back to almost 11 to 1, within a point of making hog raising profitable once more.

Experience has shown that when 100 pounds of live hog will sell for enough to buy 12 bushels of corn, farmers raise more hogs. It becomes more profitable to feed their corn than sell it.

Cattle raisers also will hould their animals longer, and corn-fatten them. That will mean a lower supply of meat inthe next few months, but an increasingly larger one after that. Before this year's crops became so promising the forecasts were that meat supplies would continue downward for a long time.

The downward movement in wheat will probably mean that several hundred million bushels of that bread grain will go under Government loan. No figures from the wheatlands on the amount of loans wheat raisers are making are available yet.

In 1942, when the price of wheat was $1.26 a bushel, and the Government support price was $1.27, farmers borrowed on more than 408 million bushels. Since then the amount under loan has decreased.

In 1944, when the average price was $1.55½ and the Government support price $1.50, about 180 million bushels went under the loan.

By 1946,when the average price was $2.08 and the Government figure only $1.64, only 22 million bushels went into Government approved storage.

The Government loan figure averages this year about $2.23 a bushel throughout the country. Prices at country elevators in the winter wheat areas are running from $1.09 to $2.05 a bushel.

In addition to being able to make Government loans on their wheat, farmers are to be permitted this year to make purchase agreements for their stocks. In other words, the Government will guarantee to buy their wheat at any time before May 30, 1949, at the Government loan figure, subject to Government inspection.

This relieves the grower of either building Government-approved storage facilities or storing his grain in approved elevators or terminals, as required under the loan agreement.

The farmer is not bound to sell, however, under the purchase agreement. If wheat goes up, or if he wants it for some other purpose, he can cancel the agreement at any time.

The purchase agreement is similar to the loan agreement in the manner of protection furnished, but the farmer is saved the expense of building storage facilities and the nuisance of negotiating loan papers.

Many wheat dealers are hopeful that farmers will take the maximum advantage of either the loan or sales agreement. By so doing, they feel, the wheat will be marketed in a more orderly manner, without overtaxing terminal and transportation facilities as in previous years, and as those facilities have been overtaxed in recent weeks since the harvest began.

War on Rising Prices Asked By O'Mahoney

By The Associated Press

Proposed increases in the price of basic commodities would have to be submitted to public inspection under a proposal advanced yesterday by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.).

"The time has come for Congress to stop dallying and to protect both the public and the Government from regimentation by the private managers of monopolistic big business," the Senator said in a statement.

He took special note of the steel industry announcement that steel price increases will have to follow wage increases, saying:

"The fact that the steel industry, under the leadership of United States Steel and Bethlehem has openly surrendered to inflation is no reason for the country to throw in the sponge, too.

"I shall introduce legislation at the special session to require the national producers and distributors of basic commodities needed by the whole people submit all proposed price increases to public scrutiny by an appropriate public agency before such increases can become effective in interstate commerce.

"Steel has never made a good faith fight against inflation. It has been shadow boxing. All the time it has been pretending to want to hold the line it has been edging prices upward."

O'Mahoney said that "Congress must protect the people against concealed profits, against unjustifiable profits and against this new increase." He said he would demand that Congress "take the covers off the pricing procedure of big business."

Anti-Inflation Plan Offered

By the United Press

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday proposed a four-point voluntary anti-inflation program and asked industry for its support to "reduce the likelihood of compulsory controls."

Government action to curb rising prices is one of the main programs President Truman is expected to lay before Congress when it reconvenes at his call July 26.

"Government intervention in the form of direct economic controls will hinder, not help, production, so badly needed at this time," it added.

The chamber recommended these measures to check inflationary forces:

1. Restraint by agriculture, business and labor in raising wages and prices.
2. Development by the Government of a monetary policy capable of controlling inflation. The chamber said that, in peacetime, fiscal and monetary measures to reduce the rate of increase in bank deposits and currency, rather than direct economic controls, are "the most effective means of dealing with inflation."
3. Reduction of expenditures by Federal, State and local governments.
4. Public and private agencies "should give every encouragement to increased savings by consumers and should urge caution in the utilization of all forms of credit."

In the 70's "Boss" Shepherd, Washington's one and only governor, regularly traveled old Brightwood Road to reach Bleak House, his home, located in what is now Sixteenth Street Heights.

Other colorful travelers through this section were the Confederate soldiers under General Early, many of whom left their names on the walls of the houses they occupied before marching on Washington. Even today the discovery of an occasional bullet or cannon ball recalls those days.

ERNEST W. BELL AND COMPANY
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS
25 BEAVER STREET, NEW YORK

To the stockholders of American Car and Foundry Company, 30 Church Street, New York City

We have examined the Consolidated Balance Sheet of the American Car and Foundry Company and its subsidiaries as of April 30, 1948, and the Consolidated Statements of Income and Surplus for the fiscal year then ended; have reviewed the systems of internal control and the accounting procedures of the companies and without making a detailed audit of the transactions, have examined or tested accounting records of the companies and other supporting evidence by methods and to the extent we deemed appropriate. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards applicable in the circumstances and included all procedures which we considered necessary.

As the result of a change in cost accounting methods, certain engineering costs, which in prior years were considered as general and administrative expenses, have in the current year been treated as direct charges to production costs. Accordingly, costs of $1,519,146.33 representing engineering expenses have been included in closing inventory of work in process with a resultant increase of approximately $930,000.00 in net earnings after Income Taxes.

In our opinion, the accompanying Balance Sheet and related Statements of Income and Surplus present fairly the consolidated position of the American Car and Foundry Company and its subsidiaries at April 30, 1948, and the consolidated results of their operations for the fiscal year, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles applied (except as stated above in respect to the treatment of engineering costs) on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

STATEMENT OF CONSOLIDATED EARNED SURPLUS

Balance, May 1, 1947		$ 41,946,713.96
Add: Net Earnings for year		4,103,951.81
		$ 46,050,665.77
Deduct: Dividends paid during the year on capital stock publicly held, viz.:
On Preferred, $3.50 per share from earnings for year ended April 30, 1947 and $3.50 per share from earnings for year ended April 30, 1948	$2,026,150.00
On Common, $3.00 per share	1,798,200.00	3,824,350.00
Balance, April 30, 1948		$ 42,226,315.77

Note 1: Federal taxes are shown before tax benefit of $158,828.29 as a result of charges made to the Reserve for Employees' Welfare Plan. This saving has been applied as a reduction in the charge to said reserve.

Note 2: Since the prior service cost under the Employees' Welfare Plan has not been fully funded, the unfunded portion is increased each year by the actuarially required interest on such unfunded portion. The amount of such interest on the unfunded prior service cost would, if currently paid, amount (after income taxes) to approximately $101,000.00 for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1948.

Congress Call Hit As 'Overstepping'

By The Associated Press

Representative Clarence J. Brown of Ohio, a leading Republican, said yesterday he does not think the Eightieth Congress is "under any particular obligation" to either of the 1948 platforms.

"It seems to me," Brown told a reporter, "that when Truman says we ought either to accept the Republican platform or give him what he calls for in the Democratic platform, he is asking it of a Congress elected two years ago without waiting for the people to say in a referendum what program they want."

Brown, discussing the session of Congress Mr. Truman has called to start a week from Monday, said that the President "stepped way beyond his right or privilege."

He said that two years ago the Republicans "pledged we would get rid of controls, communism, confusion and corruption" and promised tax relief and labor law reform. Brown added that the Republicans are making good on these pledges and should continue to "carry forward the program we enunciated then."

Let the people decide, he said, whether they want the Taft-Hartley labor law repealed, whether they want "a return to Federal controls and regimentation" and want to spend "more and more money" on projects asked by the President.

Brown, as a high-ranking member of the House Rules Committee, is in a particularly important spot. This committee decides which bills can get to the House floor, when and under what debate limitations.

Meanwhile, a ranking House Democrat said that adequate housing legislation can clear Congress in two days "if the Republican leadership will permit it."

The Democrat, Representative Spence of Kentucky, told a reporter that the Taft-Ellender-Wagner long range housing program is "pigeonholed" in the House Rules Committee. All that is needed is to bring it out of committee to a vote in the House, he said. It has passed the Senate.

"Housing could best be supplied and financed by private enterprise; but Government can and should encourage the building of better homes at less cost. We recommend Federal aid to the States for local slum clearance and low rental housing programs only where there is a need that cannot be met either by private enterprise or by the States and localities."

Seek Strategy Session

Republican Congress leaders were said to be trying to arrange a strategy meeting with the New York Governor this week. There was some talk that he might come to Washington for the meeting.

One GOP leader said there is a general feeling among party higher-ups that Congress should do two things and get the session over with:

1. Pass the T-E-W housing bill.
2. Do something about prices.

Mr. Truman included anti-inflation action in his challenge to the Eightieth Congress. He previously has proposed standby rationing powers and the right to impose price and wage ceilings if necessary. He will make his ideas known in a special message July 26.

AFL and CIO Urge Voting

By the United Press

The AFL and CIO last night called on their members not to "sit out" the 1948 elections.

Matthew Woll, member of the AFL executive council, urged organized labor to split its ticket in the November balloting.

"The many millions in the ranks of organized labor," Woll said, "will have to use their secret ballot more carefully and constructively than ever before."

He suggested that union members fight "any Congressman or Senator who voted for the Taft-Hartley Act," regardless of party.

presidential election which party do you think you will (would) vote for—Republican, Democratic, or third party?

Replies are compared with the findings of The Washington Post Poll made a year ago, when residents were asked: "If a presidential election were being held tomorrow, what political party would you favor?"

Party favored:	June, 1948	June, 1947
Democratic	29%	41%
Republican	25	24
Third (other in 1947)	2	1
Depends on candidates	28)44	24)34
Undecided	16)	10)
	100%	100%

The Democrats' lead among voteless Washingtonians is greater than its lead among qualified voters. Thirty-one per cent of all voteless citizens say they would vote Democratic, if they could; 25 per cent are for the Republicans; 24 per cent say their vote would depend on the candidates; 3 per cent are for the Third Party and 17 per cent are undecided. Among those who are qualified to vote, 26 per cent favor the Democrats; 25 per cent favor the Republicans; 2 per cent support Henry Wallace's party; 33 per cent say it depends on the candidates; and 41 per cent are undecided.

South's Stand Is Debated

give the Republicans some chance of winning there.

But McClellan's prediction drew immediate fire from Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.), close personal friend of the President, who said he doesn't think the effort to place a fourth party in the field "will be effective in more than one or two States."

The New Mexico Senator predicted election of a Truman-Barkley ticket even if some of the Southerners don't go along.

Hatch hinted the Democrats think there is some chance that Henry Wallace—scheduled to get the official nomination of his third party in Philadelphia next weekend—might not carry through until November. Wallace repeatedly has asserted he has no intention of quitting the race.

"I'm not so sure about what Wallace is going to do," Hatch said. "Politics is in such a state of flux now that no one can say just what will happen in the next month or two."

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), another friend of the President, said the Birmingham rump convention's action in nominating Thurmand and Wright could be "rather serious from the standpoint of the Democratic Party."

"If the Southerners carry out this fight," he said, "it means that the Democratic Party as a whole will have to campaign a good deal more diligently in the South than it has heretofore." He added he does not think the entrance of the Dixiecrat ticket in the field will have the effect of taking the South out of the Democratic column."

O'Mahoney conceded, however, that if the margin between Democrats and Republicans is close in any single State, a third-party ticket might cost the Truman-Barkley ticket that State's electoral backing.

Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) said he doesn't think the Dixie rebellion will make much difference in the November outcome.

"The Dewey-Warren ticket will make such a sweep that it can win without help from the South," he predicted.

Nevertheless Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York has indicated he may make a direct bid for Southern votes. Tentative plans have been made for him to campaign in Virginia, where he got 38 per cent of the vote in his 1944 race against Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The Dixiecrat bolters made plans to bid for the 137 electoral votes of Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Texas, Virginia, South Carolina and North Carolina.

By Richard L. Coe

THE BACKSTAIRS of the stately homes of England always have been Topic A of Britain's pulp press. It's junk of the purest ray chaotic the sort of lurid hijinks you find in that low-grade Sunday supplement we shan't deign to advertise; over there they go for much the same thing on the Sabbath in "The News of the World."

Something of the sort that has turned up in a picture called "Man of Evil," at the Hippodrome; in Britain as the war was closing the film was released as "Fanny by Gaslight," from a novel by Michael Sadleir.

About all it goes to prove is that the worst thing that could happen to a girl is to have been born the illegitimate daughter of a cabinet minister in the reign of the late great Victoria. Quelle vie indeed.

To depict all this misery one of the more box-office minded of J. Arthur Rank's many affiliates has employed such big-time British names as Phyllis Calvert, Stewart Granger and James Mason, the beast. James is important to the story only infrequently, though he pops up at regular intervals to further the woes of Phyllis.

Phyllis' is the most contrived mess—even a tipsy pulp writer—could imagine. Shipped off to school during the formative years, she goes back to mama and papa only to have papa, who keeps a shady house, killed in a brawl with a noble customer. This brings on a contrived deathbed sequence with mama, whose parting words lead Phyllis to discover she's really the daughter of a cabinet minister.

"MAN OF EVIL," a Gainsborough Picture of United Artists release, produced by Edward Black, directed by Anthony Asquith, screen play by Doreen Montgomery, additional dialogue by Aimee Stuart, based on the novel, "Fanny by Gaslight," by Michael Sadleir. At the Hippodrome.

Pulls a Karenina

This gentleman obligingly sees to it that she becomes employed as a maid in his Belgravia mansion, but when his wife toots away for a stay in the north, paternal instinct asserts itself and Phyllis is carted off to spend a blissful week with her esteemed papa. By that time Phyllis has learned that papa's young plaything of a wife has been carrying on with Lord Mason, the beast, (who it was, to be sure, killed her supposed papa). These tidings upset the ministerial papa to such a degree that he hurls himself under a train.

So poor Phyllis is left to her own resources to earn a living and for a lass who presumably has spent 10 years in a good school she makes a sorry mess of it. About to hire herself out as a Victorian taxi-dancer, Phyllis comes across her papa's former secretary (handsome, noble Stewart Granger) AND Lord Mason, the beast, who's being beastly to papa's widow.

Then honest Stewart's sister comes along and tries to stop True Love (I'm not sure if it was then, but let's not quibble) and we move over to Paris where one of those duels are introduced and woe is piled on woe, courtesy of Lord Mason, the beast.

The incredulities and contrivances with which Doreen Montgomery and Aimee Stuart have laden their script are shattering. Their lines are delivered with dismaying esprit by all concerned and the nonsense had me shaking with laughter, in which, I regret to say of the Hippodrome's Friday night audience, I was quite alone.

Altogether, "Man of Evil," or "Fanny by Gaslight," is a fantastic parade of bunk whose arrival here, belted as it is, is a reminder that the British public is served its cheesecloth whoopdedo even as you and I.

DIDJA notice a platinum blonde in a lavender costume at "Oklahoma!" and wonder where you'd seen her before? . . . She's Karen Lewis, you've seen her on the cover of Life and of the current Women's Home Companion . . . Karen used to work here in the Navy Department, from which she took a chance, trotted to New York and wound up as a Conover model . . . Her Life cover brought several movie offers, but Karen thinks all that's too soon and she's trying to make good in her first show . . . Reporter Dan Williams wondered if we noticed her and the answer is yes . . . Thought she was striking.

THE OLNEY'S run into trouble on its "Charley's Aunt" revival . . . Seems that a musical comedy version is upcoming with Ray Bolger in the part and production rights within 250 miles of New York are being withdrawn . . . This is complete nonsense, of course, but the publishers are standing by the letter of their rights, as though a small summer theater over 200 miles from New York will affect a Gotham musical's winter take . . . Further irony lies in the fact the Jose Ferrer, who was to play it here, was the very guy whose performance several seasons ago reminded New York and Hollywood that there was life in the old farce yet . . . Soooo, instead, next week's Olney bill will be Oscar Wilde's "This Importance of Being Ernest," with Ferrer as Algy and Viola Roache as Lady Bracknell.

"GOING NATIVE" auditions get under way tonight in the Press Club auditorium and go on and on until Producer Gene Ford has seen everyone who's applied . . . The all-local revue opens the end of August.

Rome, July 18 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII will leave for his summer residence in Castelgandolfo at the end of July, Vatican circles said today.

"The Pope will wait for political calm to return before receiving the President," the Vatican sources said.

Arabs Agree to U. N. Truce

of the League's political committee.

In his communication to the Security Council, Azzam Pasha said the Arab countries are astonished by the attitude of the Council, which considers the Palestine situation a threat to world peace under Chapter Seven of the U. N. Charter, which contains application of sanctions against the Arab nations if they refused to accept the truce.

Violations Are Charged

The league official notified the Council that members of the league hereby proclaim that the cease-fire will not bring real peace to Palestine.

He declared that the Israeli forces had violated the previous four-week truce and gained advantage from it while the Arabs respected the truce.

Azzam Pasha's reply charged that the Jews took advantage of that cease-fire to introduce illegally thousands of young men able to fight, and to acquire large amounts of tanks, planes, heavy artillery and big guns.

He told the U. N. the Arabs had to accept the new truce because of the persistence of the Security Council in considering the continuation of the war a rupture of peace, and because the Council expressed a threat to apply sanctions against the Arab states if they refused to stop fighting.

Council's Stand Questioned

The Arab spokesman also told the U. N. the Arabs were astonished that the Council's resolution referred to the provisional government of Israel. He called this a digression from the neutrality which the Council should maintain.

Azzam Pasha informed the U. N. the Arab states do not find any justification in the Council's attitude except for what he termed the desire of the great powers to help the Zionists realize their ambitions in Palestine to the detriment of the Arabs. He said the Arab armies had reestablished order and security in the occupied zones of the Holy Land and that life there had returned to normal.

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli government spokesman accused the Arabs of two breaches of the newly imposed truce. He accused Syrian and Iraqi troops of firing after the truce deadline in upper Galilee and on the central Palestine coastal plain.

Truce Considered Temporary

The Egyptian high command estimated that the number of Jews killed in action in the past 10 days exceeded by several thousands the number killed during the 27-day war which preceded the earlier truce.

The League's political committee announced in Beirut, capital of Lebanon, that Arab troops "are ready to resume the struggle when necessary until their objectives are reached." It said the Arabs consider "the cease-fire as a gap in an honorable Jihad (Holy war) which can only terminate in victory."

King Abdullah announcing the Arab cease-fire in Trans-Jordan, said all the Arab states will comply. He called the acceptance a "wise assent under pressure of the United Nations Security Council and the big powers," and added:

"The way to settle the Palestinean problem is to negotiate—a negotiation which need not be unduly hurried but which should be carried out carefully and thoughtfully."

Israel previously ordered its troops to cease fire at tonight's United Nations deadline—11 a. m. (EDT)—and not to resume fighting unless the Arabs did so.

A cease-fire had been effected earlier in Jerusalem, but both Jews and Arabs accused each other today of breaking the truce there.

Bernadotte was flying back to Rhodes after reporting on Palestine to the Security Council last week. He expects to arrive in Rhodes tomorrow.

The previous U. N. truce in the Holy Land lasted from June 11 to July 9. At its expiration Bernadotte asked for a 10-day extension. It was accepted by the Jews but rejected by the Arabs, who said it would work against them.

Jerusalem Truce Restored

The Jerusalem truce, established yesterday, was shattered in bloody fighting today but was restored during the afternoon when the U. N. Truce Commission ordered a new truce deadline.

The Jews improved their position in the Jerusalem perimeter with the capture of John the Baptist's reputed birthplace, Ein Karin, before dawn.

The Arabs, with armored cars spearheading infantry, made two attempts to penetrate the Jewish-held sector of Jerusalem facing the Arab northeast corner of the city. The Jews drove them off with automatic weapon and mortar fire.

Jewish forces were on the offensive in various parts of Palestine all day prior to the cease fire.

An Israeli official spokesman in Tel Aviv said Jewish planes had bombed an airfield and other military installations in Damascus, capital of Syria, as well as Arab targets in Palestine. Jewish vessels attacked enemy installations and recorded hits in Tyre harbor, on the Lebanese coast.

Direct Hits Reported

Israeli planes bombed in a raid officially described as "very heavy" Egyptian targets at Majdal, in southwestern Palestine, and direct hits were scored, an Israeli army announcement said.

Index of American Design Exhibit Opens at Gallery

Watercolor reproductions of early American quilts and woven coverlets, so faithful that visitors often insist they are viewing the materials themselves, are part of the exhibit of American Folk Art which opened yesterday at the National Gallery.

The exhibit runs the gamut of household objects, from furniture and kitchenware, to toys and ladies' dresses, some dating back to the Revolution.

The 104 reproductions in the collection are a part of the 22,000 items in the Index of American Design, a vast survey of American decorative arts, compiled in the late 1930s as a WPA project for unemployed artists.

One reason for the amazing accuracy of the likenesses is the special super-imposed water-color wash technic used by the artists, according to Dr. E. O. Christensen, in charge of the exhibit. The wash was built up slowly, and allowed to dry thoroughly at each stage, giving a final effect of surprising depth, he explained.

The Index of American Design has been housed in the National Gallery since 1943 when it was brought here from the Metropolitan Museum in New York City. Portions of the Index have toured the country and reached points as far as Honolulu and England.

Dutch Have Spent World Bank Loan

The Netherlands has spent the entire 195-million-dollar loan from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, John J. McCloy, bank president, said yesterday.

The major part of the loan, 121 million dollars, was spent in the United States, McCloy said, and the 74-million-dollar balance in Europe and South America. Specifically, he added, $40,200,000 went for merchant vessels, 15 million for coal, 10 million for nonferrous metals, 25 million for feeding grains, 25 million for rolling mill products, five million for lumber, five million for building materials, five million for fertilizers, and $64,800,000 for "various equipment."

In addition to the previously announced complete disbursal of the 250-million-dollar French loan, McCloy said, Luxembourg has spent $8,500,000 of its 12-million-dollar loan and Denmark $15,500,000 of the 40 million it received.

U. S. to Probe Shale Deposits

By the United Press

Government and industry are going to break into what is considered the world's largest single mineral deposit this summer.

They plan a cooperative investigation in the Colorado segment of the Green River oil shale formation to find out how much raw material it holds for synthetic liquid fuels.

Western Colorado is estimated to have 1000 square miles of shale deposits that could produce enough raw material for synthetic fuels to equal the U. S. 1947 petroleum consumption for 150 years.

The Bureau of Mines will sink seven 1500-foot drill holes this summer. The Union Oil Co. of California will drill at least four. The Pacific Oil Co., subsidiary of Standard Oil of California, will also investigate.

The bureau, with $144,000 provided by the Navy to cover costs, will work on the naval oil shale reserve No. 1 northwest of Rifle and Grand Valley, Colo.

Union Oil's land is in the same area and Pacific Oil's property lies northwest of Debeque, Colo. Both are part of 300 square miles of private holdings.

News Barrier Study Urged

Lake Success, July 18 (AP).—The United States tonight urged the United Nations to order a continuing inquiry into information barriers.

This was one of the suggestions offered by the United States in a memorandum outlining this country's views on combatting false and distorted reports likely to injure friendly relations between countries.

Secretary-General Trygve Lie sent a letter to all U. N. members May 17, asking their observations on the subject.

The United States said the best way to combat false and distorted reports is to remove information barriers. It then went on to suggest that some U. N. agency, such as the Subcommission on the Freedom of Information and of the Press, be given the continuing task of investigating obstacles to the free flow of information.

She needs an Extension Telephone. Do you?

One flight of stairs can certainly s-t-r-e-t-c-h when you spend the day running up and down. An extension telephone can help you cut those trips in half.

But aside from the everyday convenience of an extension, it's good to know that your telephone is near at hand in case of an emergency.

An extension affords privacy on the line when you're entertaining guests. And it may prevent you from missing calls.

The cost? Only a few pennies per day. Why not call our Business Office and order your extension telephone today?

Why you can get an Extension Telephone while some folks are still waiting for telephone service

No new orders for telephone service are being held up for lack of telephone instruments. It is the need for additional central office equipment, cable and other outside plant that is temporarily holding us back. We'll be able to fill new orders for service as rapidly as those facilities can be enlarged. It's a big job, but we're working harder than ever to complete it. We don't like to keep anyone waiting for telephone service.

Revolt At Birmingham

The rebelling States' Rights Democrats crossed their political Rubicon when they named Governor Thurmond of South Carolina and Governor Wright of Mississippi as their candidates for President and Vice President, respectively. Apparently all hope of their returning to the Democratic fold in November has passed. Last week Philadelphia resounded with optimistic statements to the effect that the rebels would merely blow off steam and then vote for Truman and Barkley because there was nothing else for them to do. The rump convention in Birmingham has indicated that the rebels have no more love for Governor Dewey than for President Truman. But they are willing to aid Mr. Dewey to the extent of withholding electoral votes from the President.

Our obsolete election laws contribute to the strength of the dissidents. In only seven States is it necessary for presidential electors to be nominated in primaries. For the most part they are hand-picked by party officials. In Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia the party organization is recognized as the legal agency for nominating the electors who will theoretically choose the President. In Alabama the Democratic hierarchy has already named its slate of electors and they are all opposed to President Truman.

Mississippi and Texas are among the numerous States that choose their candidates for electors in conventions—a system that usually gives the politicians in control of the party machinery a dominant voice. In Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi there is no requirement that the names of presidential and vice presidential candidates appear on the ballot. In South Carolina it is left for the party to decide whether the names of the actual candidates shall appear. Thus it is possible that the voters of some States may go to the polls without knowing for whom their votes will be counted. But, of course, this can be corrected if rival slates bearing clear-cut designations are selected.

The one thing certain at this time is that the long-threatened revolt of the Deep South is a reality. From the walkout at Philadelphia has come a splinter party that may be expected to make its influence felt in the years ahead. From the viewpoint of the Democratic Party that is a misfortune, but from the viewpoint of the South it may well be a blessing in disguise. Certainly it is conducive to more honest politics. And if it results in genuine political contests between two well-defined political groups, the net effect should be salutary. Democracy simply cannot flourish under a one-party system. One of the chief reasons why the South remains so hidebound on civil rights issues has been the absence of any well organized opposing forces that can thresh out such vital issues in the forum of public opinion. Insofar as the present movement reflects a realignment of political forces in the South, therefore, it gives hope of breaking down the political stagnation of that section.

Gonorrhea Drive

In 1947 there were more than twice as many cases of gonorrhea in the District of Columbia as of all other reported communicable diseases combined. Since 1941 the known cases of this malady have increased nearly 600 per cent. Nearly 13,000 cases were reported last year. It is estimated that another 13,000 cases were not reported. If the present trend continues, as to even the known cases, the Nation's Capital will have more than 25,000 gonorrhea victims in 1950.

Here is the shocking background of facts which has led the District Health Department to launch a year-long education and control program on gonorrhea. This easily avoided and easily curable disease, which may cause rheumatism and arthritis, which may affect the heart and which sometimes causes blindness, has reached truly alarm proportions. Part of the increase may be due to more effective methods of finding cases that were formerly kept secret by the victims. But the menace to the community is not lessened by that probability. What stands out from the present picture is the necessity for complete cooperation among medical, civic and official forces to bring the disease under control or to eliminate it.

Nine out of 10 cases of gonorrhea, the Health Department reports, can be cured safely and quickly and surely with only one injection of penicillin. A few cases require additional injections. But in any event the victim can get a complete cure by going to see his doctor or visiting a Health Department clinic where he can obtain prompt and wholly confidential treatment. There is not the slightest excuse for the spread of this disease. Only prudery has prevented it from being wiped out as smallpox and scarlet fever have been. It is time for the Capital to wake up to this hidden menace and take advantage of the cure that medical science has provided.

Pershing: American Hero

There is little doubt of General Pershing's place among the first half dozen American national heroes as the obsequies at Arlington today will testify. Thus it is not without a certain irony that alone among these heroes he represented in his character a tradition and psychology that are European rather than American. He was par excellence the type of professional officer as it was bred and matured in the European wars of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries. Making the necessary allowances for circumstances of birth and education, it seems safe to say that General Pershing would have found himself spiritually at home in the armies of Marshal Saxe or the Prince Eugene or the Duke of Marlborough, in the sense that Mr. Winston Churchill would have found himself at home in the Parliament of Burke and Fox.

This, of course, does not mean that General Pershing was an anachronism or that he did not thoroughly understand the management of modern armies or the conduct of modern war. It means only that he exemplified in extreme degree the familiar virtues and limitations of his professional tradition—absolute fearlessness, unimpeachable honor, subordination of ambition to duty, a certain narrowness of outlook, a distrust of the civilian mind, and a tendency to judge every sort of man by the peculiar values of the military trade. It is evidently a mold into which West Point, no less than Sandhurst or Saint Cyr, formerly strove to fit its products, but General Pershing fitted better than most.

For one thing, he looked the part. He was in his prime an extremely handsome man, but it was an austere sort of beauty of which the most striking features were the stern jaw, the thin and tight lipped mouth and the cold piercing eyes. Until extreme old age he retained the lithe figure of the born cavalryman; at 50 his waist was still as slender as a boy's, his carriage erect and supple.

In his service on the Western frontier and in Cuba and in the Philippines he became known among the enlisted men of the old Regular Army as a grim disciplinarian, a stickler for spit and polish, a demon at inspections. But since he combined severity with an impartial justice and with a sharp intelligence and with obvious competence in all matters of his trade he became deeply respected if not exactly loved. The same spirit is said to have characterized his handling of rebellious tribesmen in the Moro campaigns. It seems to have been partly from his reputation as a martinet, partly from the contrast of his dark hair and mustache with his clear, fresh skin that earned him in the days of the pacification the sobriquet of "Black Jack."

Pershing's strategic philosophy was essentially the same as Marshal Foch's. A war of movement and attack must somehow be substituted for the war of deadlock and attrition; but, unlike Foch, Pershing believed that the American forces should be the principal instrument of attack. He gained his point, and it probably saved the western front in May, 1918, when American divisions, thrown into the balance, stopped the last great German offensive at Chateau-Thierry and the Belleau Wood. Meanwhile, his remarkable abilities as an organizer had become evident even to the French and British politicians. Few of the criticisms directed against the administration of the AEF had anything to do with Pershing's conduct of the war. They were concerned largely with his difficulties with General March, the Chief of Staff, and with questions of discipline, such as the severity of the courts-martial, the methods of the military police and brutalities in the penal camps and guard houses. Soon after the arrival of American troops in France the summary trial and hanging of some soldiers led to a ruling that no death sentences might be executed until reviewed and approved by the President. General Pershing, of course, could be reproached for disciplinary excesses of his officers only in the highly generalized sense of responsibility for all the actions of all subordinates. At its harshest, discipline in the AEF was probably far milder than in the British army, where summary executions by firing squad were quite common, as was the barbarous practice of punishing men for minor infractions of duty by tying them spread-eagle fashion to gun limbers or caissons; or than in the French army where the Roman punishment of decimation was inflicted on veteran regiments which had mutinied after the fatigues of Verdun.

General Pershing's strength of character showed itself plainly after his triumphal return to the United States in 1919. He resisted with great firmness the various temptations offered him to exploit his glory in political fields. It is altogether probable that, had he consented, he could have been nominated for the presidency in 1920, and almost equally probable that he could have been elected. Instead, he was content to take up the duties of Chief of Staff and to serve in that capacity until his retirement. When one remembers the sad aftermaths to the military careers of Generals McClellan and Grant and Admiral Dewey, it is difficult to see how in General Pershing's position any intelligent man could have chosen otherwise than he did; yet the glamour of office blinds even the wise and the feeling of great fame and power once enjoyed is not easily surrendered. General Pershing's reward for closing his ears to the siren of politics was that his figure grew rather than diminished in the imagination of his countrymen. He became a sort of national institution, especially after the publication of his memoirs in 1931, when he fully vindicated his military reputation against his European critics. His opinions, whenever he chose to express them, which was seldom, for he disliked controversy, carried great authority, not only in the War Department but among the public generally. Thus his death in the ripeness of years and the fullness of honor will bring a sense of loss even to those to whom he once seemed a symbol of all that is imperious and arbitrary in the soldierly tradition.

Dealing With Tito

The problem of how to take advantage of the Tito-Stalin break must be engaging the planners in the State Department. It has been axiomatic during the cold war that our prime effort should be to sever non-Russian Communists from Moscow, and the Marshall Plan is part of that effort. In this respect the defection of Tito is due in some measure at least to the pressure of the Marshall Plan. Should we, as a consequence, regard Tito as a brother, and start to widen the Belgrade-Moscow rift by making him a sort of Marshall Fellow? Not unless the values that animate our foreign policy have been completely forgotten. Tito has not put on wings solely because he has broken with Stalin, and the regime and its designs remain as noxious as they were before the excommunication.

Yet a vigilant and dynamic diplomacy can and will undoubtedly capitalize on the Tito situation. The development may have improved the prospects of both an agreement on Danubian shipping and a treaty on Austria. A conference on the former, after some sparring between Moscow and Belgrade, is slated to be held July 30 at Belgrade. The spectacle of Soviet and Yugoslav delegates sitting around the same table at Belgrade will be interesting to observe. They may or may not see alike. Since Yugoslavia has suffered severely from the drying up of UNRRA imports, and since her five-year plan is lagging, she may be less hostile than the Soviet Union to an international convention signed by all the riparian owners, especially if the Soviet and the satellites are squeezing Yugoslavia with a thinly disguised blockade. Similarly, the snag in the treaty over Austria was Yugoslavia's claim to Austria's Carinthia and the Soviet demand for a bigger lump sum than other nations would consider by way of settling the Soviet claim on so-called German assets in Austria. Here, too, there may be more of a disposition on Moscow's part to disregard Tito's territorial ambitions and settle the account.

What the Tito-Stalin break ought to encourage is a relaxation in American prejudice and bars against east-west trade. Not that anything remotely resembling war implements should be cleared for eastern Europe. Far from it, but the encouragement of east-west trade is as important to the west as to the east, and thus to the Marshall Plan for economic recovery throughout Europe. Indeed, the success of the Marshall Plan is predicated on the revival of all Europe to trade. Thus, though Tito is not likely to be bribed for his defection, nevertheless he may find fewer obstacles in his way to commercial dealings. Beyond these matters, however, the only policy toward Tito at present should be to wait and see, but to be on the alert to take advantage of any opportunity that arises that will widen the Tito-Stalin division. This is being done in telling fashion on the "Voice of America."

Steel Wages And Prices

The expected has happened. The United States Steel Corp. has granted wage increases to its 170,000 employes and announced that prices of steel products will soon be increased because of higher production costs. It was evident some time ago that the company could not hold out against the pressure for wage increases after other big companies had abandoned the fight. Big Steel's capitulation comes toward the end of the period of so-called third-round increases. Consequently there is little reason to fear that the company's action will be the signal for a fourth round of increases at this time, although it will, of course, induce other holdout steel companies to make matching concessions.

Nor does the announcement of higher prices for United States steel products come as a surprise. That, too, is the inevitable outcome of higher steel wages and higher fuel and transportation costs. To be sure the effect of increasing the prices of a basic commodity such as steel will be felt over a wide area, raising production costs for all steel-using industries in varying degrees.

Fortunately, the effect of such increases on the cost of living will not be immediately felt. And if the cost of food can be kept down, as should be possible, in view of glowing crop prospects, industry will be in a much better position to wage a successful fight against fourth-round wage increases. The latest steel wage increases and the prospective increases in steel prices are simply belated adjustments made necessary by the existing inflated price structure.

Party Strength

It is indeed surprising to discover that Dr. Gallup should be so afraid of his own figures that he is compelled to write false leads for his "scientific" analysis. On July 14, there appeared in your paper as distorted a bit of slanted reporting as I have ever seen. The lead paragraph reads:

"American voters today place almost equal confidence in the ability of the two major parties to solve the Nation's most important problems. This is in contrast to the attitude of voters prior to the 1944 election when a substantial majority had greater faith in the Democratic Party to handle both domestic and foreign affairs."

To my amazement, I discovered later on in the article that Republican strength has dropped from 60 per cent in 1946 to a mere 48 per cent today. This would seem, to me, to be news, but not to the "impartial" Dr. Gallup. It is so unnewsworthy that he must go back a full four years to show that Democratic strength has declined from 55 per cent to 52 per cent. What about the upsurge of 1" per cent in Democratic strength from 40 per cent to 52 per cent in the last two years?

Truman's Challenge

Thursday morning I sat up until 2:30 to hear the acceptance speech of another candidate for the highest office in the gift of the people of this country; and, for the first time since I began to think in terms of politics 40 years ago, I hoped that no one outside the borders of my country heard that speech.

It was a fighting speech, yes; but couched in terms, and with an expression that reminded me of ward-heeler barnyard discussion of long ago.

It was all the more noticeable, perhaps, because the general result of the last day's session of that party shattered another notion. Somehow I had gained the impression, during the 15 years I had associated with Southerners that the appellation "Southern gentleman" was merely a frothy phrase. As I saw and heard these men speak up in convention, however—emotionally, oratorically, passionately, and sometimes violently pleading for what they considered the right—I gained real respect for them. I still think they are wrong, but I'm just a bit prouder today that I'm a citizen of the same country. If ever a political convention ended in anticlimax the one that came to adjournment last week is that one.

Men usually grow with the pressure of responsibility. Even crusaders mellow and are considerate of the words applied to friendly enemies. I expected the tossing of a challenge, the throwing out of a gauntlet, but I wasn't prepared for a harangue by the man who at that very moment was the representative of all that is America to all that live and labor outside.

Grocery Lines

The inadequacy of checking counters in most of our grocery stores is adding insult to financial injury. It would be in the interest of good business to let the customer out of the store instead of letting us stand and speculate on our gullibility. It can be quite perturbing to watch figures on the cash register continually bouncing up to remind us that we are living over our heads.

Equally annoying is watching Mrs. Murphy dig for those four pennies that will make it an even $1.99, while the toddler at her side is reaching for another strawberry. Some of the stores have done away with this line simply by installing enough checking counters to handle the rush-hour business. This has undoubtedly increased their patronage.

Fear Of Peace

I thank you from the bottom of my heart for publishing that fine letter from Margaret Shipman (July 13) concerning Russia's willingness and United States official reluctance to start peace talks to end the present ominous "cold war."

In this connection I should like to quote the following from the satirical pen of James J. Marshall, a highly respected lawyer of Miami: "Russia has declared peace on us. This we will resist with all the force at our command. We prepare for peace with military drafts, universal military training, a 70-unit air force, intervention in foreign countries and beachheads of armed power all over the world. Our loudspeakers and headlines protest we do this only for the sake of peace. How great is our fear of peace!"

Korean Communists

The reported lowering of the time-honored Korean national emblem by Korean Communists and in its place, raising a flag bearing the hammer and sickle of an alien nation, constitutes an act of treason. Those Korean Communists' plan to hold a nation-wide election and establish an independent government, if carried out, will constitute a graver crime against Korea.

No matter how much pressure their alien masters put upon them, the Koreans in the Russian occupied North Korea should act as true Korean patriots like the venerable Cho Mansik who is said to have refused to attend the Russian staged conference in Pyong Yang just before the May 10 election in South Korea, and not as traitors.

Information recently brought to this writer by an eyewitness of Communist activities in Korea discloses that only 2 per cent of the Koreans even in the Russian-occupied North Korea are "whole-hearted Russian stooges, and the rest are simply driven into submission by Russia's force through her agents such as Kim Ilsung.

The heralded "nation-wide-election" August 25, if it becomes a reality, will constitute a shameless political hoax. Withdrawal of American forces from South Korea, as the Communists demand, would result in the fall of South Korea into Russian control. If Russia really desires peace, she should encourage the Korean Communists to cooperate in elevating Korea to a sovereign and neutral state.

World Police Force

The following is an outline of measures for an international force to prevent war:

First, an international commission is formed to control the world police force and a court to decide any dispute under the international agreement. To choose the members of both these two bodies, the following measure is employed:

Each government separately lists nominees for these bodies from all countries whom it thinks they would all approve. Each government then strikes off from all these lists names it disapproves. If the ones that remain are more than needed for all the bodies, the governments then vote for the number required for each body.

In disputes, each disputing side chooses more than half the members of the court to decide it, and those thus chosen by both sides try the case. Thus in a court of 21, if each side chose 14, or 28 altogether, the seven or more thus chosen by both sides would try the case.

Second, the commission would then recruit, pay and control the agreed international forces, acting by majority vote.

Third, it would then supervise simultaneous disarmament of all national forces down to internal police and small arms. It would finally destroy all atomic armaments.

Fourth, during disarmament any alleged failure to disarm or obey the international agreement would be decided by the court. The commission would enforce the decision, if it was then able to do so and its action was approved by the Security Council under present voting procedure. If it did not compel such obedience, any state might withdraw from the agreement and join in any collective action of any kind with other states. After disarmament was sufficiently complete, the commission would enforce such decisions.

The same or a like body would enforce atomic energy agreements.

All punishments for violations would be against only individual offenders, officials or others.

This agreement would go into effect for the governments that concurred in it when ratified through their constitutional processes.

If not ratified by any of the required states, (United States, Soviet Union, Great Britain, France, China and a set number of others) the delegates of the ratifying states would proceed to adopt and use all of the agreement's provisions they desired for the use of atomic energy and for economic and all other benefits and to adopt such forces and armaments and other measures they approve for protection against any nonratifying states.

The above procedure requires no change in the Charter, violates none of its provisions and strictly accords with Articles 11, 12, 24, 25, 26 and 47 governing the Assembly and Security Council. It follows the proved successes of the Universal Postal Union, and many other international organizations and inter-State pacts in the United States, which bind all the States that join in them and none that do not.

The alternative clause provides a "showdown with Russia" that is both forceful and friendly, and puts any State that proposes these measures in a strong diplomatic and moral position.

Penitential Mode

THE POET AND HIS TIME, by Ernst Wiechert; translated by Irene Taeuber; introduction by George N. Schuster. (The Henry Regnery Co., $2.)

Although Herr Wiechert is probably the most celebrated writer now living in Germany, he seems to be almost unknown in the United States. At any rate I can find nothing about him in any of the reference books. I have been told that he is a lyric poet of considerable gifts, and even on the basis of the rather clumsily translated verses in this book, I am prepared to believe it. Mr. Schuster says that before Hitler became master of the country, Herr Wiechert was already popular as an author of novelettes. However, his fame seems not to be primarily for his literary accomplishments, but rather as the spokesman of the German conscience.

Wiechert, a sort of Protestant Peguy, opposed the Nazis from the beginning and continued to do so openly after they were in power. The title of this eloquent and passionate little book is taken from an address given by him to the students of the University of Munich two years after Hitler's accession to power. Put into its context of time, it is amazing not only in its courage, but in its prophetic accuracy. In that address he contrasted "the poet of the times" with "the poet beyond the times," that is to say the artist who serves the doctrines and passions of the hour with the artist who remains loyal to his hereditary values; "for the path that the history of a generation travels is not justified by its poetical works, but by the fruits that the following generation receives from the preceding one." Of the new gospel of force as the determinant of all moral questions he observed: "It may be that a nation ceases to distinguish between good and evil. It may then be that it will still win a gladiator's glory and in its battles set up an ethical system that we may call the ethics of the prize ring. But the scales have already been lifted against that people, and on that wall will appear the hand which writes with letters of fire."

Unlike so many anti-Nazi German intellectuals, Herr Wiechert did not take the opportunity to emigrate when it offered itself, but ignoring the warnings of friends, elected to remain and to suffer. Accordingly, in 1938, in consequence of his open letter of protest against the imprisonment of Pastor Niemoeller, he was seized by the Gestapo and ultimately sentenced to Buchenwald. His memoir of Buchenwald, published here a year ago under the title of Forest of the Dead is probably one of the great documents of this dark and terrible era, and, apart from these papers, the only one of Wiechert's writings to have been translated into English. Again, since the downfall of Hitler and the end of the war Wiechert has steadily refused offers of asylum in happier places, and has chosen to remain where, as he puts it, "the sun shines only through a veil." Like Niemoeller, Wiechert accepts the principle of collective guilt, and the necessity to expiate it. "Let us understand," he says in an exhortation to German youth, "that we are guilty and that it may take a whole century to wash the guilt from our hands. Let us realize that our guilt demands . . . a long and hard atonement; that happiness and homes and peace are not for us, because the others became unhappy and homeless and without peace through us."

In other words, the vanquished by the law they chose to follow have, the poet holds, no claim upon the compassion of the victors; therefore, "do not complain that henceforth we will go barefoot, that we will be hungry, that the judge will sit over us by day and by night." Rather let the spirit be plowed and harrowed by pain so that love may be sown in the ground where the Nazis had sown their hatreds. Herr Wiechert, then, is nothing if not heroic, and he seems to believe that the guilt of those Germans who feared and distrusted Hitler and abhorred his methods lay in their failure to oppose the heroism of violence with the heroism of love. "No one can say that he did not hear the stroke of the pendulum. There was no one whom it might not have concerned . . . It was not a political form like other forms. It was not a system of philosophy like other systems . . . It was not a sect which sewed a new hem on the old garment of God . . . It broke all political forms, all philosophic systems, all sects and religions. It kneaded with its hands a new idol and raised it up, high above the people, and said: 'This is God and there is nothing beside Him. And he who will not worship shall die.' . . . One had to submit to it or oppose it."

But the frightening thing about Herr Wiechert's book is the testimony of history that only few men are capable of sustained heroism, except perhaps in war, and the knowledge that the demoniac forces in modern civilization which produced Hitler have by no means perished with him. And if the moment of decision should come to us who is truly able to say that he will not let himself be cowed by "the mass soul, that in times of danger, of need of war, of revolutions arises from the primordial depths of a forgotten past?" Who is sure that he will not like Herr Wiechert's civilized Germans shut his eyes to the blood and his ears to the screams?

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

One Night's Work

IN THE annals of the American Government the scene enacted by Mr. Truman in the middle of the night at the close of the Democratic convention is unique in its disrespect for the dignity of his office and the proprieties of the Constitution. It was not pretty to think of the President of the United States hanging around backstage for hours, waiting to accept a nomination which had not yet been tendered to him. Even though he knew that the convention had no alternative but to nominate him, a decent respect for the forms of democracy would have told him that until the delegates had voted, they were in principle free to make another choice, and that, like Governor Dewey, who waited in his hotel, he must not enter the hall.

BUT HIS action when he appeared before the delegates was an even more flagrant departure from the standards of conduct which the President of the United States is in honor bound to observe. In the early hours of the morning, in the presence of a disorderly partisan meeting, Mr. Truman announced that he was convening the Congress for the purpose of promoting his own election.

The President, says the Constitution, "may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses."

A more extraordinarily extraordinary occasion than this one would be difficult to imagine: A deliberate avowed effort to make the voters believe that they must choose, not between a Truman Administration and a Dewey Administration, but between Truman's legislative proposals and the legislative record of the Eightieth Congress; that because Harry S. Truman cannot lead this Congress, Mr. Dewey will not want to lead and will not be able to lead the next Congress.

THE CONGRESS belongs to the whole people, not to a party, and it is an abuse of the constitutional power of the President to convene it in extraordinary session under these circumstances and for these purposes. Mr. Truman cannot even pretend that the public interest compelled him to call the special session. For if his main concern were inflation and housing, he would have told Congress when it adjourned that he would call it back as soon as the conventions were over. He would never have waited to announce that decision until he could use it to give a kick and a punch to his own personal campaign for election.

WERE HIS interest in the measures he mentioned sincere in the sense that he wants them enacted, he would have told the Republican and Democratic leaders of Congress weeks ago that they must stay in Washington all summer to deal with them. He did not do that. He did not even stay in Washington himself during the crucial weeks at the end of the session, working as the President can and should to lead his own party and to bring about agreement with the other party. Mr. Truman's actions are not those of a man who wants Congress to legislate but of a man who wants to fight Congress because he has figured it out that he can do better against Martin, Taber, Allen and Halleck than against Dewey and Warren.

THE MOST serious aspect of the matter is the disclosure of how thin and fragile are the safeguards and restraints of his own conception of the public interest, how secondary and subordinate they are likely to be in the strategy and tactics of his campaign. The Truman platform on the subject of foreign affairs is alarming. For just as the calling of the special session is a reckless and frantic effort to exploit domestic issues for partisan ends, so in this section of the platform there are all the indications that the international crisis may also be exploited for partisan ends.

The platform is a scandal of ingratitude, ungenerosity, and untruth. The Truman Administration claims the sole credit for the United Nations Charter and the European Recovery Program, as if Mr. Truman could have achieved them without the labors of Senator Vandenberg and Mr. Dulles, without the active influence of Mr. Dewey and Mr. Stassen.

THE QUESTION is what else Mr. Truman will do if some smart adviser tells him he can get some votes. There is no knowing. A man who in one night will call a special session of Congress in order to precipitate a fight on domestic issues and will knock the moral foundations from under the bipartisan foreign policy, has cast away the restraints which would make his action predictable.

The international crisis is very grave. What assurance is there now that Mr. Truman, who is a weak President and is at heart a jingo, will resist the tmptation to exploit it? Because he is weak the control of the great decisions, particularly about the crucial problem of Germany, is and has been from the beginning quite beyond him. He has not even kept the control of these decisions in the Department of State; though our German policy is in fact the determinant of our whole European policy, and will be decisive for peace or war, it is notorious that it has not been made by the President, or by Secretary Marshall, or by the so-called "Policy makers" but by General Clay and General Draper, and in the Pentagon, and in London, and in Berlin.

OUR GERMAN policy has led inexorably, as it was self-evident it would, to the predicament which now exists in Berlin. In dealing with this predicament we now find ourselves up a diplomatic blind alley. We have delivered three notes to the Russians which demand the immediate lifting of the blockade. But these notes contain—the French note is explicit and categorical—an assurance to the Russians that our demands, though peremptory and insistent in language, will not be enforced. At the same time these same notes announce a refusal to negotiate any question, even the question of the blockade.

Thus we are now in a position where we have made a demand which we will neither enforce nor negotiate. Is it any wonder that the demand was rejected, and that we are scratching our heads trying to think what to do next?

IT IS here that the country will need to be on guard, for the temptation to be reckless, and to take a spectacular plunge which arouses excitement and diverts attention, will increase as the predicament in Berlin becomes more exasperating, more costly and more humiliating, as the German policy which caused it becomes more patently unworkable, as the diplomacy which has aggravated it becomes more rigidly restricted to alternatives which are equally disagreeable.

Fear In Kremlin

IT IS TOO SOON to say that the great imposing structure of Soviet power in Europe has really begun to crack. Yet as the secret reports drift in from Europe, the evidence mounts daily that the rulers in the Kremlin are desperately afraid that the structure which they have so painfully erected will one day come crashing about their heads. This fear is clearly reflected in the frantic manner in which the screws are being tightened wherever the Kremlin has the power to tighten them.

A case in point in Czechoslovakia. There the first victim of an impending purge is General Svoboda, always regarded as one of the Kremlin's most willing tools. Sent to Moscow by the government-in-exile during the war, he transformed the Czech army into a Kremlin instrumentality. He was rewarded after the Moscow-engineered coup last winter with the Ministry of Defense in the new cabinet.

But somewhere along the line he must have blundered—perhaps he did not deal harshly enough with the anti-Russian demonstrators during the recent Sokol celebrations. At any rate, he is now on a "protracted leave of absence," and he is "not available for correspondence." It is considered exceedingly doubtful that his leave of absence will soon end.

YET THE UNFORTUNATE Svoboda is only the first and smallest of the Czech Communist fish to be caught in the Moscow net. Reports from sources heretofore completely reliable indicate that a full-scale purge of Czech Communist leaders has been ordered by Moscow, to take place within the next six weeks. Tough Communist President Klement Gottwald is reported to be a marked man. So are Foreign Minister Vlado Klementis and Premier Anton Zapotocki.

Gottwald, Klementis and Zapotocki have been good Communists and obedient servants of the Kremlin. But they have been politicians, and as politicians must, have been guilty of appealing to the national feeling of the Czech electorate. They have been known as "moderates," tainted with Western ideas—Klementis has even been known to make jokes. The terror which they have imposed since they seized power with Moscow's help has been a moderate, almost a polite, terror.

Now they are to be consigned to outer darkness and the terror in Czechoslovakia is to follow the grim Soviet pattern. Their power will be inherited largely by Rudolf Slanski, secretary general of the party, a ruthless conspirator wholly subservient to Moscow, and Zdenek Fierlinger. Fierlinger, a short, shifty-eyed man, is a former leader of the Social Democrats and a former Ambassador to Moscow. He betrayed both his party and his country to the Kremlin, and he is now to receive his reward.

CLEARLY, THIS PURGE, like others which are getting under way in other satellite countries, is motivated by fear in the Kremlin—fear that the cancer of Tito may spread. Indeed, the fear has already been justified, for the cancer has already spread.

Tito's defection has threatened the guerilla movement in Greece, heretofore supplied largely by Yugoslavia, with collapse. Greek guerilla leader Markos has already secretly approached the Athens government with a truce proposal and has been sharply rebuked by Cominform emissary Zachariades for his pains. The exact status of Markos is not known, but there is no doubt that already Tito's defection has made the American job in Greece much easier. A similar split has occurred in crucial Trieste, with a pro- and anti-Tito group at daggers drawn.

Before Italian Communist leader Palmiro Togliatti was shot, measures were taken to make sure that the Tito cancer did not also spread to Italy. In a scene which closely paralleled the disciplining of Maurice Thorez, first reported in this space, Togliatti was brought to heel. Early this month at a secret meeting of the top Italian Communist leadership, and in the presence of Russian and Polish emissaries, Togliatti was accused of "nationalism," and a number of subsidiary sins, including "bad reporting" and "over-confidence." He was charged with having failed to predict the Communist electoral failure to the Kremlin and with being himself responsible for that failure.

Togliatti's confession of sins, like that of Thorez, was grovelling. Indeed, it was so grovelling that some of his followers, presumably disgusted with the exhibition, loudly booed his speech. Togliatti severely rebuked them, asserting that his public submission was an admirable example of "Marxist democratic auto-criticism."

THUS, ALL OVER EUROPE, the servants of the Kremlin are feeling the sting of the Kremlin's lash. Among experienced observers, there is no longer any doubt that the frantic steps which the Kremlin is taking to insure the continued obedience of its servants are simply a measure of the Kremlin's fear.

Although this fear undoubtedly exists in Moscow, it provides no reason for complacency in the West. For again and again in history, fear within a dictatorship has led to desperate external adventures. And the rulers in the Kremlin must now be wholly aware that their ruthless blockade of Berlin involves the risk of the unimaginable catastrophe of war.

Bigger Tanker Tonnage to End Controls on Oil

By the United Press

A committee of the National Petroleum Council predicted yesterday that an improvement in tanker facilities will make Government controls over oil unnecessary this winter.

It reported that 171 more tankers, both of U. S. and foreign registry, will be available at the end of this year than were in service during the winter of 1947.

"The world availability of tanker tonnage," it said, "should balance demand for at least the coming 12-month period."

Nats Try Hard but Lose to Indians, 2-1 and 6-4

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE YANKEES, RED SOX and Athletics are giving it a good try, but that won't make any difference and they won't win any American League pennant if his man Bob Feller gets back in the groove, says Manager Lou Boudreau.

POVICH

His Cleveland club will take it all "if Feller starts winning again," Boudreau added yesterday. "He'll pitch us to the pennant," said Boudreau brightly, and then he said dolefully, "or we won't win it."

Boudreau's pennant dreams are all bound up with Feller, who with nine wins and 11 defeats, is having the worst season of his career. "I think Feller will snap out of it. He's in a slump, just like a hitter. He's still the best pitcher in the business and a wonderful guy to have going for you."

Those lickings Feller has been taking have jarred his confidence a trifle, Boudreau admits. And he's a bit over-worked, says Boudreau. "But he always was a fighter. I'm satisfied to stake our pennant hopes on him."

THE RECENT ALL-STAR business and Feller's walk-out was not Feller's idea, Boudreau says. He's taking the rap. "I saw Feller pitch the Sunday before the All-Star game. He had a no-hit game for five innings and then he lost his stuff and was licked. I asked him to stay out of the All-Star game for the good of our club. He needed rest like no other pitcher in the league."

Boudreau hasn't a worry otherwise with his Cleveland lineup, he says. It has leveled off nicely and the only position that isn't constant is left field where he is switching Hank Edwards and Allie Clark. He's excited about Larry Doby, his colored outfielder. "He was so crude in the spring we could risk him only in right field. Now he's good enough to play center against all kinds of pitching."

His pitching staff has gotten a big lift from Steve Gromek, the skinny righthander who always could throw hard. "Gromek started winning from the day Muddy Ruel taught him a change of pace. With Satchel Paige and Russ Christopher we have the two best relief pitchers on any club. I like Paige."

PAIGE COULD BE a better pitcher in the majors than he was in the colored league, says Boudreau. "He pitched a lot in the bushes, but it was different. All he was doing was throwing the ball." He never really trained his legs in shape. Now he's chasing fungos and getting in condition. He can go more than three or four innings for us no matter what his age is."

Except for a couple of days in June, Boudreau points out that his Indians have been leading the league from the start of the season "without having a winning streak after the first week when we won six in a row. Those other first-division clubs haven't had any winning streaks, either. I think we're in better shape to put one on.

"No club ever wanted to win a pennant as much as we do. All of our guys are giving it a whale of a try. Look at Joe Gordon. He's batted in more runs than he has hits. I don't think that's ever been done before by anybody in the history of the major leagues. If Feller was having one of his good years we'd be six games out in front and winging."

WHO DOES HE THINK he'll have to lick? "Boston," says Boudreau. "The Red Sox are beginning to look awful tough. They're winning, you'll notice, even with Ted Williams out of there, and with weak pitching. You can't lick all that power all the time. The Red Sox figure to give us the hardest time of it, especially when Williams gets healthy."

Boudreau isn't worried about the A's despite the fact they just smacked his club down twice. "Their pitching will keep them high up, but they don't hit like a pennant winner. Connie Mack is in the same boat I am. If his man Marchildon were pitching good ball, they'd be on top at least right now."

As for the Yankees, Boudreau says "tell me what DiMaggio is going to do and I'll tell you where the Yanks will end up. He could take them into the pennant just like Feller could take us. 'You've heard about two-team pennant races. Well, this could be the first two-man pennant race. Either Feller or DiMaggio could win it, and I'll still take our guy."

Yankees Blast Tigers, 12 to 4, After Dropping Opener, 5-3

New York, July 17 (AP).—The New York Yankees crushed the Detroit Tigers, 12-4, in the second game of a doubleheader today after the Tigers took the opener, 5-3.

The second game was called because of darkness after 6½ innings. Hal Newhouser gained credit for his fourteenth victory of the year in the first game, which Hoot Evers highlighted with a grand slam homer.

Fairfax Takes Over League Lead

Fairfax moved into undisputed possession of first place in the Eastern Fairfax league by downing McLean, 7-3, yesterday. Vienna, meanwhile, dropped a 6-5 decision to Falls Church. The win put Fairfax one full game in front of Vienna.

In other league games, Herndon extended its losing streak to eight straight as they bowed to the White Sox, 19-3. Falls Church moved one game closer to Annandale in the battle for third place when they defeated Annandale, 10-6.

Seerey's 4 Homers In One Game Equal Record; A's Split

Philadelphia, July 18 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox split a pair of games with the Philadelphia Athletics today, winning 12-11 in 11 innings and then losing, 6-1, in the five-inning nightcap cut short by Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew law.

Pat Seerey, the stock left fielder of the White Sox, blasted out four home runs in the first game to equal a long-standing major league record.

Seerey swatted three home runs in succession in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. No one was on base when he connected the first time but there was one man on for his second four-master and two for his third.

He Finally Ends It

The final smash came with the score tied in the first half of the eleventh inning.

Seerey, who hit three-round trippers in a single game on July 13, 1945, tied a mark held previously by Bob Lowe of the Boston Nationals in 1894, Ed DeLahanty of the Philadelphia Phillies in 1896, Lou Gehrig of the Yankees in 1932 and Chuck Klein, also of the Phillies in 1936.

All but Klein hit their four homers in a regulation nine-inning game. Klein hit his fourth homer in the tenth inning.

The 25-year-old fielder, traded this spring by the Cleveland Indians, had hit seven previous homers this season.

Parade of 10 Pitchers

The first game, one of the wildest contests of the year, took three hours and 44 minutes to complete and saw 10 pitchers parade to the mound.

The A's reeled off five quick runs, but lost the lead in the middle of the game when Seerey homered in three straight innings—the fourth, fifth and sixth—and the White Sox built up an 11-7 lead.

But the A's came surging back as Eddie Joost cracked for the circuit with two on and the score was tied 11-11 at the end of the regulation nine innings.

There the score stood until Seerey unlimbered his fourth circuit smash in the 11th with no one on base. That swat earned Howie Judson the victory and cost Lou Brissie the defeat.

Pieretti Retires Fain

The A's came back to load the bases in the last of the 11th, but Marino Pieretti came in and retired Ferris Fain for the final out.

Bill McCahan won his first game of the season in the nightcap and knocked in the winning runs himself off Bill Gillespie. McCahan singled home two runs in the fifth and final inning. The A's went on to score three more times before the contest was called.

Braves Bump Bucs Twice, 10-2 and 3-1

Pittsburgh, July 18 (AP). — The top-place Boston Braves swept a doubleheader from the Pittsburgh Pirates today, taking the opener, 10 to 2, and the nightcap, 3 to 1.

Vernon Bickford bested the veteran Ernie Bonham in the second contest which went scoreless for six innings. Bonham pitched no-hit ball until the seventh when Earl Torgeson got a double to open the inning.

Ralph Kiner hit his 26th home run of the season and his 100th of his major league carrer in the ninth inning to give the Buccos their only run.

Nelson Potter, former American Leaguer, won his first start in the senior circuit when he held the Pirates to seven hits in the opener.

Another former American Leaguer, Jeff Heath, was the big gun in the Boston attack, slamming out a home run with the bases loaded, a double and two singles.

Jim Russell, Boston outfielder, was ejected in the initial inning by Umpire Al Barlick for protesting too much when Mel Queen, first of three Pirate relief men, picked him off first.

A crowd of 36,116 witnessed the double Pirate defeat.

Bosox Beat Browns Twice, 12-5 and 7-6

Boston, July 18 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox spotted the St. Louis Browns four-run leads in both games and then came from behind to sweep the doubleheader, 12-5 and 7-6, today before a 28,563 crowd.

Birdie Tebbetts hit a two-on homer for the Bosox in the opener and Relief Pitcher Ned Garver belted a four-bagger for the Browns' last nightcap run.

The Red Sox sewed up the first game with a pair of six-run rallies after Starter Dave (Boo) Ferriss was belted out of action in the third inning. During the fifth of that game, Eddie Pellagrini, former Bosox, started a triple play after making a shoelace catch against Junior Stephens.

Olympic Games, With or Without Their Squabbles, Inspire Millions

Prostrate England Plays Host As Is 'Sporting Thing to Do'

[Editor's Note—This is the first article in a series of six by author, columnist and star newsman Bob Considine, ringing up the curtain on the 1948 Olympic games which begin in England July 29.]

By Bob Considine

London, July 18 (INS).—The ultimate tribute to the durability of the Olympic games, which may have begun 15 centuries before Christ and which were exhumed in 1896 after a 1504 year intermission, is that they are being held again in the year of our Lord 1948.

Considine

They will be staged with all their traditional pomp, drama, bickering and deification of the body beautiful at seven playing areas beginning July 29 in a war-battered England whose government admittedly faces bankruptcy.

To the games, with much the same high purpose as was possessed by naked Greek runners of remote pre-Christian eras, will come more than 5000 athletes from 62 nations, a unique assembly greater in number and broader in scope than the United Nations—but with the same over-all hope of establishing some form of brotherhood among men.

Few of the nations will be able to afford the expense of competing. More than half will travel to London poorly provisioned for the physical ordeals which lie ahead, and depend on Britain's depleted larders for the remainder of their food.

England, prostrate victor in its worst war, will play host not only because "it's the sporting thing to do" but because it wishes to give its people a show, and with that show a spiritual lift.

This will be the fourteenth modern Olympiad, and the eleventh set of Olympic games.

The word Olympiad means, roughly, a four-year period. World War II eliminated the games from the twelfth and thirteenth Olympiads, 1940 and 1944. The total extermination of the games would be as difficult to achieve as would the eradication of man's will to challenge, to compete, to win.

The games bear a remarkable resemblance to the games of the ancients, though sports are added or dropped and each renewal brings men of new shades, shapes, sizes.

The theme remains constant. It was given in rock, scrawled on papyrus, shaped into statuary, preserved on parchment through the Dark Ages and resurrected in the 1890's by a relentless French dreamer named Baron Pierre de Coubertin, who wrote:

"The important thing in the Olympic games is not to win but to take part. The important thing in life is not the triumph but the struggle. The essential thing is not to have conquered but to have fought well. To spread these precepts is to build up a stronger and more valiant and above all more scrupulous and more generous humanity."

De Coubertin, father of the modern games, knew there would be disputes, disharmony and—the thing he most dreaded—rampant nationalistic fervor striking at his efforts to restore the spirit of the games.

All these things came to pass in the modern age, will be visible again in the 1948 games and for as long as it takes human nature — only microscopically altered in 4000 years—to change for the better.

He knew that the disorders of Modern Olympics, however meaningless, would attract more attention than the order, for it had always been thus.

The Greeks cried "professionalism" at Roman athletes a hundred years before the coming of Christ, and accused one another of unfair practices for previous centuries. In 392 A. D. Roman athletes, angered by charges that they had been subsidized, burned the dormitories which housed the other athletes, destroyed athletic equipment, cracked skulls.

And the Emperor Theodosius abolished the games that year. "A nuisance" he called them.

But De Coubertin believed that these were specks, incidents. The games had proved their worth. They had served to unite the warring tribes of Greece, had broken the hostile barriers that separated other ancient cultures, had been—in truth—the first means man had of meeting on a common ground.

They were great enough to have been spared when Roman shields crushed Greece, lofty enough to have imposed periods of absolute peace upon a chronically warring world.

To De Coubertin, that was the importance of the games, to the restortation of which he devoted his fortune and his life.

He lived to see a wrangle over the admission of Germany in the first of the modern Olympics, in Athens in 1896. He saw the dream nearly collapse from lack of interest and meager funds at Paris in 1900. He saw the semi-boycott of the 1904 Olympics at St. Louis by foreign athletes.

He saw the Olympics return to glory in 1908 at London—to be marred by officials who picked up the Italian marathoner, Dorando, and helped him across the finish line ahead of Hayes, the American, and went through the shambles of taking away Jim Thorpe's medals in 1912, for professionalism.

To his horror, he had to sit by and see the introduction of the scoring systems in 1924 at Paris. He did manage to see the games officially "protected" from the point system (which he felt struck at the theme of the Olympics) but the "unofficial newspaper count," as it was called, grew despite his hostility, though to this day there are no official winners among the nations.

He lived to see his beloved games boldly perverted into a show of Fascist strength by the Nazis in 1936 at Berlin. He died six monthes later, impatient with human nature in general but content that it could be improved in time by such common groupings of races, religions and cultures, and that out of that improvement would come enduring peace.

He had summed up his philosophy toward Olympic wranglings in these words:

Baron Pierre de Coubertin Kept Modern Spectacle Alive

"Heaven preserve us from a society in which there are no excesses and where any expression of impassioned feeling must be kept imprisoned within the narrow confines of convention."

It has become almost a cliche among latter-day sports writers to blast the Olympic Games as trouble makers and stokers of the fires of international discord.

But, by and large, the games have produced goodwill, have exposed future leaders of all countries to their counterparts in the world, created understanding, bridged barriers which even in the enlightened era of the United Nations still bind and segregate the peoples of the earth.

The London Olympics will produce squabbles. Over the games will hang the moody fact that Russia—rather than expose to impartial timers and measurers the same Russian athletes who have reportedly been breaking world records behind the iron curtain—did not choose to compete. There is indignation in Eire, too, because Britain refused to yield its North Irish athletes to Eire proper.

But the games will be held and will, as usual, create more understanding than the reverse. "Stronger and better individuals" will emerge and, directly or indirectly, inspire countless millions of youths through the world to emulate them.

Symbolically, the British have installed an unquenchable gas "Olympic torch" at Wembley Stadium, scene of Olympic track and field events, soccer, swimming, boxing and other main events. The portable torches which runners will carry in relays from Mount Olympus to London are equally unextinguishable.

So are the games, which not even a Roman Emperor could condemn to death or generations of petty acrimony and the convulsions of two world wars defeat.

Hot Rivals Tied For 2d

Bums Romp in 2d, 13-4, After Cards Win First, 6-3

St. Louis, July 18 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers steamrollered the St. Louis Cardinals, 13 to 4, in the second game of a doubleheader today after the Cards had won the exciting eleventh inning opener on Terry Moore's three-run home run, 6 to 3.

Hank Behrman checked the Birds with six scattered hits in the finale, including Stan Musial's twenty-second homer. The crowd of 32,761 was the largest of the regular season here.

The Dodgers scored all their 13 runs in the first two innings of the second contest, which saw six Cardinal pitchers parade to the mound. The Dodgers' 13 hits included a brace of doubles by both Peewee Reese and George Shuba. Shuba batted in three runs and Roy Campanella also accounted for three. Al Papai and Red Munger stopped the Dodgers cold after their early rampage.

Moore's blow supplied a thrilling climax to the bitterly contested first contest. It came with two out and found Musial and Enos Slaughter on base. Moore had entered the game as a pinch-runner the inning before.

Cubs Defeat Phillies, 3-2

Chicago, July 18 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs took both ends of a double-header from the Philadelphia Phillies, 3-2 and 6-4, here today.

Robin Roberts forced across the winning run in the ninth inning of the curtain-raiser when, with two men on base, he hit Phil Cavarretta and Andy Pafko with successive pitched balls. Del Ennis paced the Phillies to their win in the final by driving in three runs and scoring two more himself on his fourteenth homer, a double and a single.

Laurel Closes Successful Harness Race Season Tonight

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Harness racing bows out for the season tonight at Laurel Raceway but the sports infant on the local scene already has grown to adult proportions.

In fact, the Laurel plant has created a considerable stir in harness circles. United States Trotting Association officials and the brass from other trotting tracks have been flocking there to try to discover what's making Laurel's opening twice as successful as any in trotting history.

They don't have to go much farther than the mutuel windows. Already an estimated 165,000 patrons have wagered almost 3½ million dollars in an effort to determine if winners are as difficult to pick as in flat racing.

For a track that wasn't supposed to be able to open on schedule, Laurel has come a long way. You can't get away from awarding a few laurels (small "l," that is) to young Dick Hutchinson, jr., and Tom Clagett, jr., president and secretary-treasurer, respectively.

The two socialites, who make eager beavers appear on the slothful side, really have put out all the way. On June 21, they won the toughest race of the meeting—they were able to open.

As a good-will gesture to the horsemen, tonight's closing feature, the Governor's Pace, will carry a purse of $1200. Originally it was only $600.

Program choice is In Command, who will be handled by Billy Myer, the meeting's top driver. Bound to attract support are Pat Hubbard's Bluejacket, Harry Stout's Frisco Hobo, Harry Case's Anna Hal and three or four others.

After tonight's last program, Hutchison and Clagett can take it easy—for about three weeks. Then, they say, work will commence on improvements planned for next year. Among other things that includes additional barns, entrances, parking lot facilities and—perhaps—a clubhouse.

WHAT'S THE PRICE OF A BUICK?

7 out of 10 Guess Too High!

WE'LL admit that this husky two-ton honey looks like something super duper.

When you sample its ride, its handling and the silken liveliness of its big Fireball straight-eight power plant, you are likely to ticket it in the near-luxury class.

So, naturally, when we put the question to a cross section of carwise men and women — when we asked them to name their idea of the delivered price for a Buick SUPER — 7 out of 10 guessed too high!

The fact is that—in relation to today's values—Buick prices begin at a lower level than before the war.

Dollar-wise, all prices are up—but Buick cars are not up as much as most other things — or even as much as the cost of building them.

So don't jump to conclusions without a bit of shopping around. Get the delivered prices — not only on Buick but on others, too — including cars with far less power, far less heft, far less room and far less distinction.

You'll find that a lot of folks are paying within a few dollars of the price of a Buick — or maybe more than the price of a Buick — and getting something that can't hold a candle to what a Buick has to offer.

You'll find that price comparison gives you another sound reason for getting your firm order in — particularly since your Buick dealer will take it with or without a car to trade.

Our Four-Square Selling Policy

1. NO PRICE PADDING. We guarantee our prices to contain nothing but the charges which were standard practice in figuring prewar delivered prices. You receive an itemized bill of sale. And we display all prices in our showrooms.

2. NO "LOADING" OF UNWANTED ACCESSORIES. All cars are delivered with accessories as ordered, and prices are figured to cover these. We pledge ourselves to add no "extras" except those each customer orders.

3. NO COMPULSORY TRADE-INS. We will take your order and deliver your car without requiring a trade-in. However, we have many valued used-car customers we would like to supply and we will give you a fair and reasonable allowance on your present car.

4. NO COLLUSION WITH "GRAY MARKETEERS." We will not knowingly be a party to the sale of Buick cars to any individual who operates in the "gray market." Our only interest is to deliver new cars to bona fide customers.

Interior to Add 2200 Employes This Fiscal Year

INTERIOR expects to add about 2200 employes during this fiscal year. The new workers can be employed under the department's substantially larger budget, which was approved by Congress. However, practically all of the new jobs will be outside of this city, particularly in the Reclamation Service.

The department had an average of 52,813 employes during the 1948 fiscal year that ended June 30. Its officials estimate it will have an average of 55,000 employes during this fiscal year. But despite the increased staff, the department must reduce the number of employes engaged in personnel work from 295 to 260.

STORY: Fred Canfil, a United States Marshal in Missouri, is an old and faithful friend of the President's. His nickname is "Bull" and no one ever accused him of being a diplomat. He has visited the President here at the White House on several occasions.

On one of his visits a diplomatic reception was to be held and Fred was invited to attend. At the gathering he overheard several State Department officials engaged in pleasant conversation with a group of Mexican diplomats over the outcome of an election campaign in Mexico.

Fred "The Bull" interrupted them to exclaim: "I know who's going to win that election." The diplomats politely asked: "Who?"

"The candidate who has the most bullets," shot back Fred with a big laugh. He got cold stares in return.

TRANSFERS: With the tight labor market, the Civil Service Commission is hearing complaints from Federal agencies that their staffs are being raided by other agencies. Most of the complaints involve the field offices of the Army which are expanding. If they continue, and more agencies demand that something be done, the commission may be forced to restrict transfers from one agency to another. But if that happens, the employe who wants more money is likely to leave Government for industry.

CEILING: The Army and Air Force now believe they can legally puncture the Byrd law ceiling on classified employes. A provision in the Selective Service Act apparently gives them ample authority to hire beyond the ceiling limitation. Also, AF employes who take aircraft out of storage are exempt from the Byrd law.

Oddly enough, Congress gave both Army and AF funds to hire many more civilians, but it failed to lift the ceiling figures in the Byrd law. That law limits the number of classified employes to 176,000. The Army ceiling is 126,000; AF is 50,000.

WHITE HOUSE: David Noyes, who was Donald Nelson's assistant at the old War Production Board, is a good bet to get a top assignment at either the White House or the Democratic National Committee. He's an expert on public relations. There's also talk that the Administration will try to bring back Jonathan Daniels who was a press secretary to FDR.

NOTES: The left-wingers are taunting the presidential candidates of the two major parties with this comment: "It's Tweedledum vs. Tweedledewey" . . . John W. Gibson, who has his resignation in as Assistant Labor Secretary, is being boomed for Labor Undersecretary. He knows the department and could easily handle the post . . . Bob Jones, a Weather Bureau information specialist, has resigned to accept a job with three times his Federal salary with a Pittsburgh concern . . . Anaya Smith of Public Housing, has an article on public housing in this month's American Mercury.

ITEMS: The annual efficiency rating institute will be held July 27 and 28 in the Interior Auditorium. George Moore of the House Civil Service Committee will open it. . . . Managers of the restaurant in the House side of the Capitol are fearful they won't be able to reopen by the time Congress reconvenes. They released all of their employes last week and told them not to report until January. . . . A big group of Agriculture employes has joined BSM, the Brotherhood of Sensible Men. They are wearing open-collared shirts to their offices.

CLERKS: Civil Service may again extend the time when CAF-3 and 4 war service and temporary clerks must be fired. Agencies report that eligible clerks on the Civil Service register are refusing to take jobs when offered. The deadline for firing these people is supposed to be July 31.

JOBS: An exam is open for chart requirements aide and analyst. The jobs pay from $2394 to $4149 to start. They are open at the Air Force fields here and nearby. Get full information from the Fourth Regional Civil Service Office here. . . . INTERIOR: Thirty-odd employes who were given lay-off notices by the Bureau of Land Management are planning to appeal them. . . . LABOR: Robert Wagner, jr., is being mentioned for Labor Secretary.

Pamphlets To Be Issued In Campaign Against VD

Business Groups To Give Out 450,000 In Drive to Curb Crippling Diseases

A barrage of 450,000 leaflets describing causes and symptoms of gonorrhea will be issued this morning as part of a year-long District campaign against the crippling sex disease.

The pamphlets will be distributed by cooperating business groups, hotels and rooming houses, taxis and drug stores, liquor dealers and taverns, restaurants and barber shops.

Objective of the drive is to advise the public as to the symptoms and urge the infected to apply to their own physicians or to free public clinics for treatment.

Can Be Cured Quickly

Gonorrhea can be cured swiftly, painlessly, with one or two injections of penicillin, the leaflets will point out.

Free distribution to physicians of penicillin is one of the drive's highlights. With enough penicillin available initially to cure 17,000 victims, the District Health Department has provided about 100 medical men, on request, with shots for 1000 patients.

The drive is sponsored by the District Health Department and the United States Public Health Service, with support of District medical societies.

To indicate the seriousness of the gonorrhea menace in Washington, Dr. S. Ross Taggart, director of the District venereal disease bureau, pointed out in a talk over WINX last night that some 13,000 persons were known to have fallen victim to the disease last year.

Six-fold Increase

That figure, he said, represents a six-fold increase over 1941 and accounts for more victims than the total toll of the next 10 most communicable diseases. Most gonorrhea victims, about 40 per cent, are only 20 to 24 years old, he said.

While sex education has traditionally been regarded a sacred right of parents, clergymen can exert great influence in deterring youth from indulgence which invites infection, Dr. Orris Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church and welfare committee chairman of the Washington Federation of Churches, said during the radio forum scheduled to precede the official opening of the drive. He advocated more church and school cooperation with parents in education of youth as to sex and disease problems.

Plain Talk Urged

Another forum speaker, Joseph Sanders, board member of the District Social Hygiene Society, said too many parents still regard venereal disease as a hush-hush subject and are hesitant to discuss it forthrightly with their children. He urged that prenatal and premarriage blood tests, designed to combat syphilis, be required here.

Moderator of the program was Preston R. Fish, publicity director for the gonorrhea drive.

Earlier yesterday, at 1:30 p. m., radio station WOOK broadcast "The Force of Ignorance," a half-hour dramatization by Maurice Barrett, which emphasized that "the germs of fear and shame are more deadly than the germs of venereal disease."

The drama, stressing the need for prompt treatment by physicians, not quacks, was produced by the American Institute on Race Relations in cooperation with the District Health Department.

$2500 Donation to Merrick Boys Club Camp . . .

WORTH A CHEER—Dedication of St. Mary's Chapel at the Merrick Boys Club Camp Sunday was accompanied by the donation of $2500 from The Washington Post's National Celebrities Golf Tournament Fund. Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Post, hands the check to Ricky Harris, 6, of 818 8th st. ne., held by C. J. Mack, president of the camp. Camp Treasurer John Reilly is on the left while Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle, who dedicated the chapel, looks on.

Boys' Club Camp Visited By Archbishop

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, smiled happily as he strode about the grounds of Camp Nanjemoy, the Merrick Boys Club camp in southern Maryland.

The archbishop had real reason to be pleased with what he had seen at this modern, well equipped camp for under-privileged boys on the lower Potomac. He had seen 132 happy youngsters demolish a big chicken dinner. He had seen them splashing in a well supervised swimming area—very welcome on a hot day. He had watched the races, the tug-o-war.

He had dedicated a neat new chapel on the grounds, to be known as St. Mary's Chapel.

With C. J. Mack, president, and John A. Reilly, treasurer, he had accepted a check for $2500, allotted to the Merrick Boys Camp by The Washington Post from the fund obtained from the National Celebrities Golf Tournament.

"This camp is a fine tribute to the loyal men and women who have worked to build it," Archbishop O'Boyle said.

In addition to the new chapel there are new cottages donated or sponsored by the Variety Club and the Touchdown Club.

Camp Nanjemoy, which is about 60 miles from Washington, conducts four camping sessions of two weeks each and this summer will give outings to nearly 600 boys. They are all boys whose parents could not afford to send them to camp.

In addition to the archbishop, the following directors attended the day's program at the camp:

Reilly, Mack, William J. Bray, James A. Cassidy, James V. Castiglia, Dr. Philip A. Caulfield, Maurice R. Colbert, Robert W. Davis, John F. Donahue, S. Dolan Donohoe, Rutherford J. Dooley, Raymand A. DuFour, Frank Emmet, Hugh P. Flynn, Thomas A. Flynn, Levin P. Handy, Dr. Valentine M. Hess, Herman A. Schulteis.

Francis J. Kane, Harry J. Kane, jr., William A. Kehoe, Dr. Joseph V. Kennedy, J. Harold Kilcoyne, Charles P. Maloney, M. Joseph Matan, Arthur J. May, Alfred A. McGarraghy, Robert M. Meehan, Joseph C. Monaghan, Dr. Edward M. O'Brien, James Francis Reilly, Dr. William J. Stanton.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

REAL TREAT—The chicken dinner which followed ceremonies yesterday at the Merrick Boys Club Camp was also highly impressive, as Terry Quill, 10, of 4017 7th st. nw. (left) and Pete Wathen, 7, of 628 I st. se. indicate.

CARE Services Are Extended

CARE, non-profit food parcel organization, yesterday announced that its services have now been extended to include Japan. Approval was given by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of Allied Forces in the Pacific.

A special food package, containing items most necessary and acceptable in the Orient, has been designed by leading nutritionists. Ten thousand of the packages are now in Japan, ready for distribution.

House Bought By Neighbors Is Being Sold

A Northeast Washington house cooperatively purchased by homeowning neighbors to control its sale has been tentatively sold to a former South Carolina family for $15,500.

H. C. Maynor, real estate dealer with offices at 2002 Rhode Island ave. ne., said yesterday that Owen W. Jackson of 514 Rhode Island ave. ne. had made a down payment on the house.

Carl Wack of 3100 24th st. ne., trustee for the neighbors, said a contract for purchase of the house would probably be signed in the next day or two.

The house, on a corner lot at 3101 24th st .ne., was recently purchased for $15,000 by residents of the vicinity who banded together and contributed funds to buy it after they had seen Negroes inspecting the property.

Jackson has lived in Washington about five years, Maynor said, and has four sons, one with the Army in Japan and the others in college.

Ready Soon

Direct-Dial Long Lines For District

Washington will be among the first big cities to have a direct-dialing, long-distance telephone system, company officials said yesterday.

Chesapeake and Potomac representatives said the new system will be tied in with present service in four or five months. A new building, under construction adjoining the present C. and P. building at 725 13th st. nw. will house equipment.

The new system will permit long distance operators in a large city to dial any telephone in another large city, direct, eliminating local operators over the route. The time will be reduced to a few seconds, telephone officials said.

Officials explained that the new system will not require altering of subscribers phones, and is an addition to, rather than a change in, the present set up.

AFL Firemen Call Meetings On Murphy

AFL firemen in Washington will hold two "special" meetings Tuesday to consider a demand to divest Fire Chief Clement Murphy of his power to appoint upper bracket fire officers without competitive examination.

Pvt. E. R. Currier, secretary of Local No. 36, International Association of Firefighters, said yesterday the sessions have been set for 8:30 a. m. and 8 p. m. at 935 G pl. nw. This, he said, will permit firemen on different shifts to attend.

Currier, attached to the Nineteenth Engine Company, said he was ordered last week by Capt. L. F. Price, president of the local, to summon members to the special meetings. Some 30 members are required to petition the union president for irregular sessions during the summer recess period of the organization, he pointed out.

Members are expected to receive a resolution charging that noncompetitive promotions above the rank of captain make it possible for Chief Murphy to hand out advancements as "plums" for "services rendered."

The resolution calls for substitution of a promotion system "based upon an average of service, intelligence and efficiency similar in effect to that system now used . . . in the lower brackets."

Fire Chief Murphy could not be reached for comment.

Metal Workers Win 25-Cent Raise

Settlement of a strike of AFL sheet metal workers—for a 25-cent hourly wage hike—was announced yesterday by union-management spokesmen.

Chester Pierce, chairman of the negotiating committee for Local 102, Sheet Metal Workers Union, announced that all of the 200 workers originally involved in the walkout will be back on the job today. The strike began July 1.

The settlement gives workers a wage increase to $2.50 an hour from $2.25.

C. R. Breneman, secretary of the Sheet Metal Contractors Association, most of whose members had earlier declined to go beyond a 15-cent hourly hike, said:

"We were forced to give in."

Postlude

Male Quartet's Limitations Appear

By Paul Hume

Last night's Watergate concert, featuring the Revelers, a male quartet, was neither fish nor fowl.

It makes difficult reviewing, and the opinions expressed in this column will, as always, be those of just one man. The institution of the male quartet has had a long and unique history. Adherents of the foursome system of singing abound under the lengthy title of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America.

Twenty-five members of the Washington Chapter of this society were guests of the Revelers at last night's concert. Yet it is an incontrovertible fact that there is no literature of any worth for four men's voices. The inevitable outcome of this situation is that such groups rely on arrangements of varying suitability for repertoire. This kind of performance has little place in a series of concerts designed to attract a concert-going audience.

Last night's audience was large, but not the size it would have been had there been a great pianist, violinist, or singer on the program. It represented Washington's response to the presence of a male quartet on a concert series. As quartets go, the Revelers seemed satisfactory. They left me no warmer than they found me, and unfortunately, no cooler.

Howard Mitchell did his best to achieve a balanced program in the face of obvious difficulties imposed by the enagement of a quartet. He added some interesting Americana to our hearing with a new short overture by Don Gillis, fam[illegible] writing from Morton Gould and Richard Rodgers. The first half of the program, orchestrally speaking, delivered Kabalevsky's brash but exciting Kolas Breugnon Overture, and the overworked Gayne suite of Khatchaturian.

In a stunt piece for strings, entitled "Fiddle-Faddle," the results were astounding. There are players in those string sections who cannot play as well as that music came out, but the total effect was excellent.

Altogether, we felt that last night was the management's one slip of the season. From here on in, every concert looks topnotch, with Todd Duncan, Youskevitch and Kaye, Arrau, all-Tschaikowsky, and Swarthout.

Wednesday: Todd Duncan, with Leonore No. 3, Strauss' Don Juan, and Espana.

Concert Support Urged By Board President

Leon Chatelain, jr., president of the Washington Board of Trade, last night urged Washingtonians to safeguard Watergate Concerts for this and future seasons by reserving seats for remaining Watergate programs this year.

Speaking at last night's Watergate Symphony during the intermission, Chatelain explained the Board of Trade had been "challenged" by the announcement three months ago that the concerts would have to be abandoned because of deficits.

He said the board, convinced that "thousands of music lovers in the Washington area would support the summer concerts," joined with the National Symphony Orchestra Association and station WTOP to raise the $14,000 guarantee that enabled the concerts to continue.

Chatelain pointed out that receipts for the first five concerts are ahead of last year's, and almost equal to the cost of production, giving "reasonable hope" that it won't be necessary to call on the guarantors for their pledges.

The Watergate series will last two more weeks, with six more concerts. He urged support for "this inspiring cultural asset."

Virginian Killed, 14 Hurt in Area Auto Accidents

Norfolk Victim's Wife and Child Are Injured in Skid Collision

Traffic accidents took a toll of one dead and 14 injured in Greater Washington over the weekend.

Arnold H. Block, 39, of Norfolk, Va., died early yesterday in Prince Georges General Hospital of injuries sustained at 8 p. m. Saturday when his auto collided with another on Crain hwy., a mile south of Defense hwy., in Prince Georges County.

Injured in the same accident were Block's wife, Lenore, and their daughter, Judy, 5; the driver of the other car, Benjamin Day, 24, of 1518 O st. nw., and two passengers in his auto, Mrs. Effie Fields, 27, 1831 Vernon st. nw., and Evelyn Montgomery, 25, Madison, N. J.

Skids Out of Control

According to police, a heavy rainfall had slicked the road surface and the Block vehicle suddenly skidded out of control into the path of the oncoming machine driven by Day.

Mrs. Block was admitted to the Prince Georges Hospital with a broken left shoulder. Her daughter, Judy, was treated for cuts and taken to her grandparents in Baltimore.

Day and the two women with him were treated for cuts and bruises and released.

Police placed a technical charge of manslaughter against Day and he was released on bond for a hearing July 30 in Upper Marlboro police court.

Three men were injured in another accident at 1 a. m. yesterday when a taxi operated by Bernard E. Pumphrey, 44, of 2135 32h st. nw. collided with an auto at 15th and Q sts., nw.

Pumphrey was admitted to Emergency Hospital suffering from fractured ribs and a broken collar bone. Driver of the other vehicle, Aye Cobb, 34, of 1109 New Hampshire ave., nw., was admitted for neck and leg injuries; and William A. Jones, jr., 22, of 1424 Q st., nw., a passenger in the cab, was treated at Emergency, then transferred to Mount Alto Hospital with a possible skull fracture.

Injured in Collision

In an accident on East-West hwy. near 16th st. nw., Mrs. Robert A. Philipson, 47, of 3900 Cathedral ave. nw., received chest bruises when the automobile in which she was riding collided with a truck at about 8:30 last night.

Mrs. Philipson was admitted to Suburban Hospital for observation. Her husband, who was driving, was uninjured, police said. The driver of the truck was Robert Brooks of 401 P st. nw., also uninjured.

A man and his wife suffered cuts and bruises shortly after 1 a. m. yesterday when their car smashed into a parked auto on Frederick ave., in the west end of Gaithersburg, Md.

Driver of the machine, Harold Bennett, 29, of Gaithersburg and Mrs. Bennett were admitted to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, for treatment for cuts, bruises and shock.

Owner of the parked car, which was unoccupied, was Charles M. Easton, Gaithersburg. Bennett was charged with reckless driving. Hearing date has not yet been set.

A Washington woman and two District men were injured in a "good Samaritan" mission in Lower Marlboro early yesterday.

The woman, Mrs. Frances Reed, 4910 Arkansas ave. nw., had visited North Beach, Md., with a friend, Suzanne Bleicher, 700 5th st. ne. During the day, Suzanne Bleicher injured her arm and was taken to Calvert County Hospital at Prince Frederick.

Mrs. Reed asked Albert J. Sauer, 717 17th st. nw., and Charles A. Williamson, 3216 12th st. se., if they would drive her to the hospital to visit her friend.

En route, on Lower Marlboro rd., the car skidded and overturned. Mrs. Reed was admitted to Calvert County Hospital with a back injury, Sauer was treated for lacerated right hand and discharged, while Williamson was treated for a possible rib fracture and also discharged.

James H. Ward, 35, of Jacksonville, Fla., was still unconscious and in "critical" condition at Arlington Hospital yesterday following an early Saturday morning accident in which he and his son, "Peewee," 3, were struck by a taxicab on Route 1, in Arlington. The boy, who suffered cuts, bruises and shock, has "improved" since he was admitted in "fair" condition.

Plight of Poor

Group Plans Handicapped Area's Help

Nearly 20 persons, including representatives of four churches, formed a committee yesterday to improve conditions in socially handicapped Census Tract 48, which covers an area around New York ave. nw., and 7th st.

James F. Montgomery of 1244 New Jersey ave. nw., a District school teacher, was elected chairman at the organization meeting, held in Ephesus Seventh Day Adventist Church, 6th and N sts. nw.

Galbraith A. M. E. Z., Turner Memorial A. M. E., and Shiloh Baptist churches also were represented at the meeting.

Speakers described such conditions in the tract, bounded by New Jersey ave. nw., New York ave., 7th st. and Florida ave., as:

Twenty-two people living in a five-room house.

Landlords receiving their rent from agents who collect it through "runners," each of whom gets a "cut" which is added to the original rent.

Flagrant sexual immorality—that in one instance was visible through the window to a church congregation engaged in morning worship.

Poverty, ignorance and poor housing were blamed in part for the ills of the area.

B. J. Blake of 635 Otis pl. nw., said, "48 is mostly occupied by Negroes and their economic backgrounds do not permit anything better. A beautiful new playground would be fine, but if the children come to a rat-infested room at night your good work is undone."

Montgomery said, "Many of these people don't know there is a rent control board, or how to get to it. And if they complained, they would be forced out. They don't get receipts and they don't know to whom they pay their rent."

Miss Nancy Lovell of the Women's Bureau, Metropolitan Police Department, said, "Very often we find a need for larger low-rent housing for large families, who now have to stay where they are because there is no other place for them to go."

Montgomery said, "The tract is part of No. 2 Precinct and is largely responsible for its high criminal rate. It costs the District twice as much as is received from it in taxes."

Miss Marie Justiss of 1410 Bangor st. se., was elected secretary, and Blake, treasurer. Howard E. Browne of 1223 Linden st. ne., was chosen chairman of a planning committee.

A meeting of the general committee is tentatively scheduled for August 1.

5-Cent Fare Hike Starts On WMA Lines

A five-cent increase on most interstate runs of the WM&A Motor Line, Inc., serving Prince Georges County and southeast Washington went into effect yesterday.

Leslie L. Altmann, president and general manager of the company, said the Interstate Commerce Commission had granted the increase when no protest was registered after 30 days notice had been given.

Altmann stated that increases in labor and other costs made the higher rates necessary. The present union contract, which continues to May, 1949, together with pay raises to other personnel, will swell the company's payroll by more than $50,000 this year, he said.

WM&A buses serve 10 communities from Washington to Chesapeake Bay. The old rates ranging from 15 to 35 cents have been raised a nickel on most routes, Altmann said.

The company has also petitioned the Public Utilities Commission, said Altmann, for a rate increase on buses operating within the District from 10 to 15 cents cash or 12½-cent token fare.

Area News In Brief

Rail Ticket Sales Off, Rate Up Today

Railroad ticket sales, nearly three times greater than usual on Friday and Saturday, tapered to normal last night with the new increased rates going into effect after midnight.

Eastern railroads, following approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission of an average fare increase of 17 per cent, sold tickets to all purchasers at the old rates up to 12 o'clock.

At Union Station and outlying tickets offices some travelers bought as many as 40 or 50 tickets. There was heavy buying by a few Washington business houses. Ticket sellers reported that some people complained, while others indicated they would travel by air or use the family car more often.

Coach travelers are hardest hit by the increase. A round trip coach ticket to New York, for instance, today will cost $15.50, including tax, as compared to $11.50 yesterday. The advance amounts to a 20 per cent increase for interstate coach tickets and 14.3 per cent in sleeping and parlor cars. Commutation fares remained the same.

Knight, 26, a streetcar operator, of 1230 Holbrook ter. ne., yesterday reported 80 weekly passes, valued at $120, and $7.60 in cash, stolen from the dash board of the streetcar he was operating. Minister Calls Liberalism More Than Easy Tolerance

Liberalism is a positive philosophy rather than uncertainty or easy tolerance, the Rev. Raymond B. Bragg of Minneapolis, executive director of the Unitarian Service Committee, declared yesterday.

Speaking at All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., Mr. Bragg asserted that liberalism is a definite movement today, with these basic characteristics:

1. Belief in the inherent worth of persons and their right to freedom. Authoritarian political systems reject this principle, he declared.

2. Devotion to objective inquiry, respect for the facts, and integrity in dealing with them. In Nazi Germany, he said, certain areas of investigation were forbidden and this tendency, he added, is not absent in the United States.

"I cannot imagine a sound and significant anthropological investigation in large areas of the United States," Mr. Bragg said.

3. Loyalty to justice and fairness to all without regard to race or religion.

4. Belief in the supremacy of intelligence, and constant re-examination of our institutions and customs in the light of changing events. Our institutions are being remolded in the "crunch of circumstances," he stated, questioning whether they were being carried forward accidentally or with basic intelligence.

Liberalism, he emphasized, cannot identify itself with one particular economic system or institution. We cannot identify liberalism with the economy of eastern Europe, nor with economic spheres of laissez faire, he declared.

Liberalism can identify itself only with wholesome, thoughtful experimentalism, Mr. Bragg stated.

He urged those who support these principles of liberalism to fight for them, to point out the inadequacies of other systems. Extension of these beliefs alone offers a possibilty of world peace, he declared.

Material Goods Not Enough, Canon Says

We cannot meet the world's needs by exporting material goods alone, the Rev. Merritt F. Williams, cathedral canon at the Washington Cathedral, asserted yesterday.

Canon Williams, who returned last week from Europe, emphasized that food, clothing and machinery must be sent if Europe's millions are to live at all.

"You and I must send with the cargoes of wheat a new conviction that men and women can rebuild a new life. A new conviction and a new hope that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed to us," he concluded.

Too Self-Centered

At McKendree Methodist Church, 24th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne., Dr. Horace E. Cromer asserted that we have become altogether too self-centered. This expresses itself in self-interest, whether it is in exclusive control of atomic bombs or a patent on freedom, he said.

The greater good of the world is opposed to this exclusion, Dr. Cromer declared. The greater good is found in the spiritual values of God and Jesus Christ, which are a part of the "must legislation" for the lives as well as souls of the world, he concluded.

At Gunton Temple Presbyterian Church, 16th and Newton sts. nw., Dr. Bernard Braskamp called for serious study and consideration of the platform of Christ. "This is the master platform after which all others must be patterned if they are to be successful," he stated.

The two outstanding planks of this platform are our filial relation to God and our fraternal relation to our fellow men, Dr. Braskamp declared. Unless we build upon these two principles, he said, we will be building upon sand.

Mary Haworth's Mail

College Girl's Sweetheart, Well-to-Do, Wants Immediate Marriage, but Insists She Must Give Up Education and Abandon Journalist Ambitions

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My crucial problem is whether to choose a career or marriage. My widowed mother is in her fifties, and my sister, who isn't very well, has only a small job which pays $20 a week. My brother provides the bulk of the family income.

For two years I have been taking a liberal arts course in college, preparatory to entering a school of journalism this fall; and to finance my education I have worked as a waitress in summer, have waitressed at school in exchange for board, have clerked in a department store on Saturdays and been a baby-sitter off and on.

In my first year at college I met Harvey, son of a reputable well-to-do family in our community. We have been going together ever since and lately he has been pressing me to marry him.

Girl Must Work To Help Family

HE WANTS a wife who is neither a student nor a careerist and he cannot wait the two years it would take me to finish the journalism course. I don't want to quit college or marry immediately after graduating, as I feel I owe my family a lot. What I've been earning isn't nearly enough to pay for tuition and they have helped me a great deal. Also my brother would like to marry as soon as I graduate; and then who would support Mom and Sis?

Right now Harvey is doing nothing, but as soon as we marry his father has promised him a job in his firm at a starting salary of about $65 a week, which wouldn't be enough to support us all.

My problem is whether to marry him and leave my family in a predicament, or lose Harvey, who is actually my "future." What shall I do? Please advise me, for without your help I am liable to make an impulsive wrong decision.

J. Y.

Man's Demands Are Infantile

DEAR J. Y.: Harvey isn't good husband material. If he were, he wouldn't be so impossibly difficult in attitude.

You say he wants a wife who is neither a student nor a careerist; and he cannot wait the two years it would take you to complete the higher education you've mapped out for yourself.

As to that, Harvey doesn't know what he wants. His desires and demands aren't reasonably formulated or positively arrived at. Rather he is animated by the spoiled-child reflex of negative combative selfishness. It simply occurs to him that his will must prevail in love-relationship, in terms that celebrate his ego-supremacy over any counter-considerations.

His overriding indifference to your family situation, also his refusal to tolerate the prospect of your maintaining "outside" interests after marriage, are bluntly indicative of jealous infantile autocrat meanness.

Doesn't Amount To Hill of Beans

IN EFFECT he is asking you to strip yourself of all other affiliations, goals and fealties, and to do it now, as the price of becoming his wife; and to make his patronizing terms the more ridiculous, he has neither a job or any purpo e in life, except to ride on his father's coattails.

Harvey's big problem is what to do with himself, which doubtless explains his hurry to get married: something to do after college, I suppose. As a potential helpmeet, he doesn't amount to a hill of beans. The attributes of reason, responsibility and cooperation are foreign to his makeup; and I think you would be perfectly miserable as his wife, whether you married him now or five years from now.

So my advice is to firmly reject his obstreperous demands and resolutely proceed with your education, confident of your ability to negotiate a future in which he'll never be missed. M. H.

No Radical Changes Say Dress Designers As Showings Begin

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 18.—Tomorrow morning this town's high-stepping dress industry will take the lid off the fall fashion picture and let the Nation's press look it over.

Most of the girls who write fashion news from Maine to California are here for the show, a week-long affair that runs from 8 a. m. daily on into the small hours. The brain child of Eleanor Lambert of the New York Dress Institute, these biannual events (held each January and July) present a composite picture of what we can expect our wardrobes to look like a few months hence.

MISS PRESTON

The fashion editors, as eager as the next woman, for something new and sensational in the clothes department, will hopefully troop to each showing. But, spoiled by a wealth of radical changes in the silhouette in the past two years, this season's collections may seem dull to us by comparison. For the advance word from the designers' is that they are following the middle-of-the-road policy for 1948. No more startling innovations is their solemn promise.

The majority of them shudder at the word "hobble skirt" and stoutly maintain they're having no part of it. Slim skirts, yes, but definitely not the old-fashioned hobble type.

But aside from that the designers are not telling us much in advance, preferring to let us wait until tomorrow when we can see for ourselves.

AMONG the collections we will view and report on in the coming six days are those of Hattie Carnegie, the style setter for dainty, feminine suits and dresses; Nettie Rosenstein, who will give a supper show at Sherry's on Park avenue to show off at better advantage her glamorous, extravagant satins and laces.

Adele Simpson, one of the cleverest designers of medium-priced clothing, will have an important show, as will Claire McCardell who does dramatic things with sportswear. Then there will be Pauline Trigere, a French designer who has been in New York for several years, and has gained a reputation for making exquisite clothes. Philip Mangone will show his coats and suits; Maurice Rentner his collection of coat dresses and little suits.

There will be dozens more including Eta, Tina Leser, Ben Reig, Anna Miller, Kiviette, Hansen Bang, Joseph Halpert, Mildred O'Quinn, Jane Derby and Herbert Sondheim.

Sally Victor, Lilly Dache, and Laddie Northridge will have individual shows of their fall hats and we will see the other collections in a giant roundup show put on by the Millinery Fashion Bureau. In addition there will be a special showing of shoes at the Hampshire House; a show each of jewelry, accessories, lingerie, neckwear and stockings.

Hints for Cooks . . .

The herb tarragon, in either fresh or dried form, is suitable for flavoring salad dressing, salads, fish and chicken dishes.

Since frankfurters are cooked when manufactured they need only be heated; cover them with boiling water and simmer (do not boil) for about 5 to 10 minutes, until they are thoroughly hot.

Sprinkle a cream pie with a mixture of orange rind and sugar; this combination is also delicious when used as a topping for plain vanilla cookies.

Combine maple syrup and marshmallow cream, using half a cup of the syrup to one-quarter cup of the cream, for an ice cream topping.

Combine crabmeat (canned or fresh) with white sauce and grated yellow cheese for a casserole dish that can be reheated at the last moment before serving. Top with buttered crisp cereal crumbs.

How to Make Lamp

I noticed a letter from S. K. in your column the other day asking how to make a lamp from a glass brick. My husband has made several lovely lamps with such bricks, using relatively simple tools. He made copper frames for them, attaching the electrical fixtures to these frames. We would be glad to tell S. K. how they were made if she cares to telephone us at District 4939 in the evening. C. E.

I should like to know if it is now unlawful to sell feather bedticks? A. D. T.

So long as the feather bed has not been in contact with a contagious or communicable disease an individual may lawfully sell it to either another individual or a firm.

Could you repeat instructions I've seen in your column on how to remove a heavy deposit from the inside of an old syrup pitcher? M. K.

A syrup deposit which has been allowed to dry in the pitcher can be removed by gently breaking the surface with a spoon and then putting very hot water into the pitcher. As the water cools, pour it out and refill with hot water. Each time the water is changed, try to work the deposit loose so that the hot water can dissolve remaining deposit. It may take several days of water standing in the pitcher, but in time, all deposit should be removed.

Is there any place I could have flowers pressed or made into pictures? Some department stores sell beautiful pictures made of pressed flowers, but they are done in New England. I should like to have corsages made into pictures. S. U.

I have not been able to find a firm in Washington which does this sort of work. You could press and dry the corsages yourself and place them in a frame made to order for them, but flowers preserved by home methods cannot be expected to be as colorful as those done commercially. As a matter of fact, the process used commercially is very complicated and, since most firms work out their own process, it is kept a trade secret.

Perhaps some Ask Anne reader has had such work done professionally and will pass along the name of the firm to S. U.

Can you tell us if the whitish stains on a dark blue linoleum-like covering of a kitchen sink unit can be removed, and the color restored? Also, can you tell us how such stains may be prevented in the future? M. deF.

Since these stains are white, it seems a good possibility that the color has been removed from the linoleum by strong soaps or a household bleach. If this is the case, I'm afraid there isn't anything which will restore the color short of painting the entire surface. Of course, a painted surface at the sink is not as satisfactory as linoleum and would have to be repainted frequently to be kept in first class condition. However, if you do paint it, be sure first to remove all possible wax and grease from the surface by wiping with benzene. (Benzene is inflammable, so use with open windows and doors and extinguish pilot lights and other open flames). Use a good quality enamel or paint and apply two coats.

The only way to prevent such stains is never to use bleach near the linoleum and immediately wipe up any soap or alkali which touches it. Keeping the linoleum protected with several well polished coats of wax will help to prevent any spilled liquid from absorbing.

I have just purchased a broadloom rug and am keeping it on the floor with a pad under it. Is it advisable to lay some moth-proofing paper under the rug or pad. Or is there some other method that will afford a degree of moth protection? L. C.

I know of no moth-proofing paper which will keep moths from a rug in use. For such papers to be effective, the rug must be thoroughly cleaned, rolled, wrapped and sealed in the paper. One of the best home protections against moths is to use care to vacuum the rug thoroughly, especially in the dark corners and little used places—at least once a week. This will remove the larvae and eggs before they have a chance to do damage. Spraying the rug occasionally with a good moth repellant will help to keep it free from them.

Also, there is a firm which has two stores—one in Arlington and the other in Silver Spring, which has a mothproofing process for rugs, etc., which they guarantee "forever." The Arlington shop can be reached by calling Oxford 2644; the Silver Spring shop by calling Shephard 8100.

Baby's Wakefulness at Night May Be From Too Little Food

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There are two problems which keep cropping up repeatedly these days. One of them is the tendency of nursing babies, at about seven to eight months of age, to waken in the night and demand to be nursed. The second is the wakefulness of the baby who will eat all his solid foods, but refuses to drink his allotment of milk.

The first usually stems from the waning supply of breast milk. As the time for weaning approaches, the amount of milk diminishes and the baby mirrors his dissatisfaction by demanding an extra night feeding. This is the time for weaning and it should be started promptly when the mother assures herself that the behavior is chronic not temporary.

The second problem also has to do with nourishment. In this case the baby fills up on solid foods, but does not drink sufficient milk to keep him satisfied until morning.

In some cases the answer is to give the milk first. The hungry child will drink at least half the bottle or cup of milk and still find the food sufficiently attractive to eat his portion of that.

Sometimes the mother can get in more milk by giving food and milk alternately, a few spoonfuls of food, a few ounces of milk.

The mid-day meal, when a varied assortment of foods is offered, may be the one at which the child spurns any extra milk. Some part of this bottle can be used with the solid foods, or in the form of milk foods, such as custard, or cottage cheese.

If half of the eight ounces is used in this way, the other four ounces may be given in the middle of the afternoon along with a cracker or two.

It isn't desirable for a mother to worry about exactly how much milk a baby takes. Some of them thrive well on only 16 ounces to drink and an additional amount used in other ways. But when the child is wakeful at night and the intake of milk is temporarily low, it is well to think of ways in which he can be encouraged—not forced—to increase the amounts.

NOTICE OF SALE—THE NATIONAL Capital Housing Authority, hereinafter referred to as the "Authority," will offer for sale and removal from the site four portable houses located at the following addresses in Washington, D. C.: 49 K Street S.E., 51 K Street S.E., 1002 Half Street S.E., 1711 14th Street N.E. The above houses are of the portable (removable in panels) type consisting of living room, two bedrooms, kitchen and bath (toilet, washbowl and shower). They are of temporary construction, do not meet with the District of Columbia building requirements and are not suitable for long term residential use. They are, however, adaptable for vacation-type summer housing, tourist cabins, migratory seasonal farm labor, and non-residential use. Prospective purchasers contemplating any use of the houses other than nonresidential are advised to first clear with the proper authorities within the area in question concerning such case. Applications for the purchase of these houses in sealed envelopes marked "Application for Purchase of Portable House" will be received until 3 p. m. on the 23rd day of July, 1948, in the Legal Office of the National Capital Housing Authority, 1737 L Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., when they will be publicly opened. The houses will be sold for cash only. Fifty dollars (money order or certified check) must be enclosed as a deposit with the offer to purchase. This deposit shall not apply as a part of the purchase price, but shall be held by the Authority to insure compliance by the purchaser of the terms of the sale and removal contract, and not to exceed twenty-five dollars ($25.00) thereof shall accrue to the authority to reimburse it for capping the sewer and water systems. The balance of the deposit shall be returned to the purchaser upon satisfactory completion of the sales contract. Deposits will be returned to unsuccessful bidders. The authority reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any informalities in connection therewith. The sale of the houses is subject to the following terms, conditions and priorities: 1. Only one house will be sold to any one bidder. 2. The successful bidders upon notification shall enter into a sale and removal contract with the Authority embodying the terms and conditions of this proposal. 3. The successful bidder shall be required to remove the house at his own expense within fourteen (14) days from the date of notification to so do by the Authority. The site shall be left clear of all building material and debris. Any excavations, holes or ruts, made or resulting from the removal, shall be filled in and levelled off. In the event that the house is not removed and the site restored within the prescribed time, the sales and removal contract shall be considered breached, and the Authority reserves the right to consider the purchase price forfeited and remove and dispose of the house without recourse by the purchaser. The deposit balance shall be treated as stated above. 4. Successful bidders shall be determined in the following order of priority: a. Government agencies. b. State and local governments. c. Nonprofit institutions. d. Individual consumers. (1) Veterans of World War II and Servicemen. (2) All others. Documentary evidence that a prospective bidder is an eligible purchaser within the above classifications shall be furnished the Authority. In the event of tie bids within the priority classification, the Authority will draw lots to determine the award. The applicable definition of Veterans of World War II and any further information can be obtained at the Legal Office of the Authority, 1737 L Street, N.W. WM. R. SIMPSON, Jr., General Counsel. Fond Farewell Was Just a Stall

ROMANCE: The newspapers published a picture of Clark Gable saying goodby to "Slim" Hawks, former wife of Howard Hawks, at the Cunard pier. The papers reported that the sailing of the Queen Mary had been delayed for more than half an hour by Gable's private farewell to the lady . . . That was a lady, but that was no farewell. Both had been at a party with Leland Hayward and Joe Cotten. Cotten was on the transatlantic and Hollywood phones negotiating some last-minute business before he sailed. Hayward stayed until the business was transacted, and he asked Gable to escort Mrs. Hawks to the boat—he and Cotten would join them later . . . Gable and Mrs. Hawks stalled at the pier to give the others time to make the boat. But Cotten tarried too long and Gable and Mrs. Hawks could pretend no longer. The Queen Mary sailed without Cotten.

DECISION: One of the problems of the Alien Property Custodian involves property owned by American citizens who willingly remained in Germany after the outbreak of the war . . . Many Americans didn't avail themselves of the opportunity to be repatriated after the outbreak of hostilities . . . David Bazelon, the Alien Property Custodian, will attach all their properties—and for the first time property owned in America by American citizens will be considered alien owned. The Department of Justice will defend this in the courts on the theory that those who chose to live with Hitler during wartime violated their citizenship and are not entitled to its property protection.

PROTOCOL: A unique situation exists in the operation of the Molnar play, "The Play's the Thing." It was produced by Gilbert Miller. One of his associate producers is Michael Ellis. Ellis also is stage manager of the show. As stage manager he is outranked by Company Manager D'Arcy Miller, nephew of the producer. But as associate producer, Ellis outranks Company Manager Miller . . . When a dispute arises between them, D'Arcy must inquire: "Are you acting in your capacity as stage manager, because then I outrank you?" But if Ellis, as associate producer, tries ordering D'Arcy, then D'Arcy must submit—unless he shows his ace card, a document signed by Producer Gilbert Miller designating D'Arcy as his legal representative.

PROMOTION: Paul Lockwood, secretary to Governor Dewey, helped plot the Oregon campaign which brought Dewey the nomination. And if Lockwood's work for Dewey continues to be as successful, and he becomes secretary to Dewey at the White House, it will cost him $171 a week . . . Lockwood learned this one recent night when he met Matt Connelly, Truman's secretary, at the Stork Club. They compared salaries: Lockwood gets $18,900 a year. The Presidents secretary gets $10,000 a year. And Lockwood may have to take a cut of $8900 a year.

CHATTER: Republican leaders anticipate that between Election Day and January 20, Washington will look like Pittsburgh, because of the smoke from the burning of private documents accumulated in the past 16 years . . . Luigi Antonini, head of the Italian-American Labor Council, sails this week to attend the dedication of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Orphans Home in Palermo . . . Ben Hecht is at work on the book he's been promising for 18 years, "Child of the Twentieth Century" . . . MGM offered Meyer Berger, the New York Times reporter, a writing job for its documentary series. Berger declined. "My ulcers won't stand it."

PROPOSAL: Orson Welles is in Capri, trying to recuperate from chickenpox and from a possible Torch—the lament over unrequited love. He isn't sure about the Torch, because he doesn't know if his love is unrequited. The lady is a Roman beauty, and he is so much in love with her that he proposed marriage. "Did she accept?" he was asked. "I don't know," the perplexed Welles sighed. "Because I don't understand Italian and she doesn't understand English."

The Family Scrapbok

By Dr. Ernest G. Osbourne

'My Baby Boy'

Though usually said in jest, the introduction, "This is my baby boy" (or girl), used with children from 4 to 40 often tells us something quite significant about the way a mother feels concerning children.

We don't like to see children grow up—or at least many of us act as though we didn't. Successful men and women of mature years will find themselves treated as though they were still small children when they return to their childhood home for a visit. Sixty-year-old mother will want to be sure that her 36-year-old son is warmly enough dressed and is prepared against possible rain—in spite of the fact that her son has been taking care of himself for 15 years and is responsible as a husband and father.

Understanding children can accept this sort of "babying" without being too worried or upset, but many find it difficult and embarrassing.

There are, of course, many reasons underlying a parent's need to cling to the childhood of her children. One obvious one is that he (or she) has never developed grown-up interests that continue even after children have left the home. They live fondly in memory of the days when the youngsters were small and dependent.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Truman Didn't Want Barkley

By Drew Pearson

If you took a poll of Senators as to the best-loved man in the United States Senate, the winner—among both Democrats and Republicans—probably would be Alben Barkley of Kentucky.

Barkley

A few years ago the vote would not have been that way. Barkley used to have a sharp tongue and a fiery temper. Once he referred to his now good friend Senator Tom Connally as 'that boob Senator from Texas," and once, when Tydings of Maryland was demanding a procession tax on shoddy (wool), Barkley remarked; "The Senator ought to know something about shoddy, since that is something on which he is an expert."

Then there also was the memorable occasion in 1944 when the Kentucky mountaineer that lurks in Alben Barkley's soul flared to the surface in a vitriolic denunciation of Franklin Roosevelt for his veto of the tax bill.

That speech—that flare-up of temper—probably affected the history of the U. S. A. more than any Senate speech in half a decade. For had Barkley not lashed out at Roosevelt, F. D. R. undoubtedly would have picked him for vice president at the Chicago convention three months later. In that case Alben Barkley, not Harry Truman would be President of the United States today.

Barkley's Sorrow

As the years have passed, Alben Barkley has seen his share of sorrow and disappointment. For a long time his invalid wife lay almost at the point of death. Day and night nurses were necessary. Unlike some Senators, Barkley has no lucrative law firm or independent income to augment his Senate salary; and for a long time he economized, forewent an automobile, and filled lecture engagements to pay the doctors' bills.

Barkley also watched a long procession of his friends leave the Senate for rewards in other fields. Jimmie Byrnes, Harold Burton, Lewis Schwellenbach, Homer Bone were elevated to the judiciary. Harry Truman was picked for Vice President. But patiently Barkley continued in the thankless job of leading the Democratic side of the Senate in the exhausting rough-and-tumble of pushing his party's legislation through Congress.

On one occasion, Barkley even urged the appointment of Jimmie Byrnes to a Supreme Court vacancy which he, Barkley, had secretly hoped to get himself. But when he heard that Byrnes was interested, he went to the White House and asked Roosevelt to give the post to Jimmie.

Barkley's Humor

While sorrow and disappointment have moulded Alben's character, they have not made him bitter. The fiery temper has been dampened, and Barkley is more philosophical, more understanding, more of a friend of man. But the famed Barkley sense of humor is just the same—only the Senator doesn't use it so pointedly on his colleagues as he once did when the late Huey Long was bragging to the Senate about his own education.

"Did the Senator ever study music?" interrupted Barkley.

"A little," replied Huey modestly.

"Then suppose," shot Barkley, "the Senator sings for us a little."

Barkley calls dressing for dinner putting on the "heavy harness." When Chip Robert asked how the ladies liked his new mustache, Barkley replied:: "Like a rabbit does a briar patch." Toasting the late Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, then aged 80 but looking 60, Barkley said: "May Mrs. Stotesbury live to look her age."

Thumbs Down on Alben

Only a few White House insiders plus Barkley himself know that President Truman was not too anxious to have the Senator from Kentucky as his vice presidential running-mate. There was nothing personal about Truman's opposition. Though the two men are not close, and though Barkley last March complained that the President hadn't seen fit to consult either him or Sam Rayburn for three months, the President has a high regard for Barkley.

However, he told close advisers that the juxtaposition of their two neighboring States—Missouri and Kentucky—added nothing geographically to the ticket, whereas the Republican candidates—coming from New York and California—had a wide geographical appeal.

Also Truman thought Barkley's age—70—would make it difficult for him to stage a vigorous campaign.

Finally, the President's personal candidate, next to Justice William O. Douglas, was trust-buster Senator Joe O'Mahoney of Wyoming. O'Mahoney's opponents, chiefly Irish-Catholic Democratic leaders, urged that O'Mahoney not be on the ticket because of the religious angle.

To this Truman replied that he wasn't worried about the outcome of any campaign if the Republicans were foolish enough to inject the issue of intolerance. If the Republicans wanted to make political issue of the naming of a Catholic, he said, it would only harm them.

It was Senate Secretary Leslie Biffle who overrode the President's wishes and privately lobbied among delegates to nominate the venerable Senator from Kentucky. In doing so, Biffle knew that, regardless of age or geography, what the Truman ticket needed most was the pacifying influence of a man who has helped heal wounds in the Senate and can now help to heal them in the sore and smarting Democratic Party.

Not So Great

In paper, book and magazine . . . I read of people great. . . . Who rise to public prominence . . . In early life or late . . . And from their number it appears . . . I have an equal chance . . . To gather gold and gain the height . . . Of glory and romance . . . But every time I punch the clock . . . Or get my meager pay . . . It seems my dreams are just as faint . . . As they are far away . . . I look around this busy place . . . And all I ever see . . . Are just my fellow workers and . . . The boss who glares at me . . . And though I try to do my best . . . And I am seldom late . . . I never reach the ranks of those . . . Who are considered great.

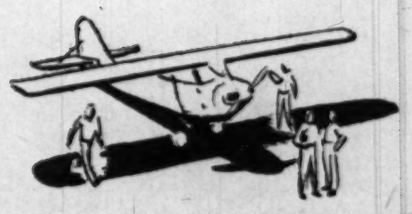
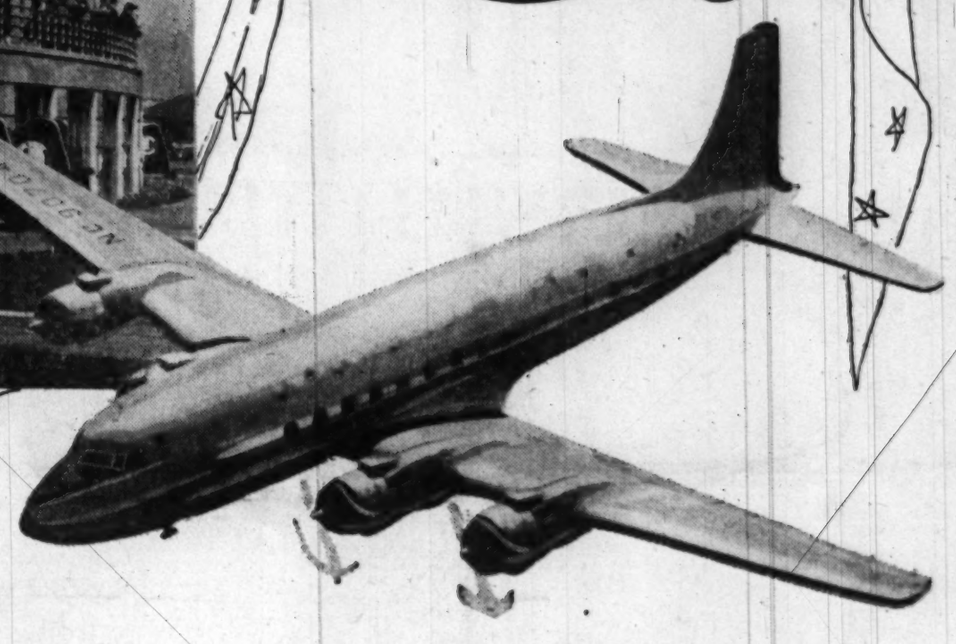
★ No. 15 IN A SERIES DEDICATED TO THE NATION'S CAPITAL, Washington ... ITS INSTITUTIONS AND ITS PEOPLE ★

The Washington National Airport, one of the nation's most beautiful, is under the supervision of the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

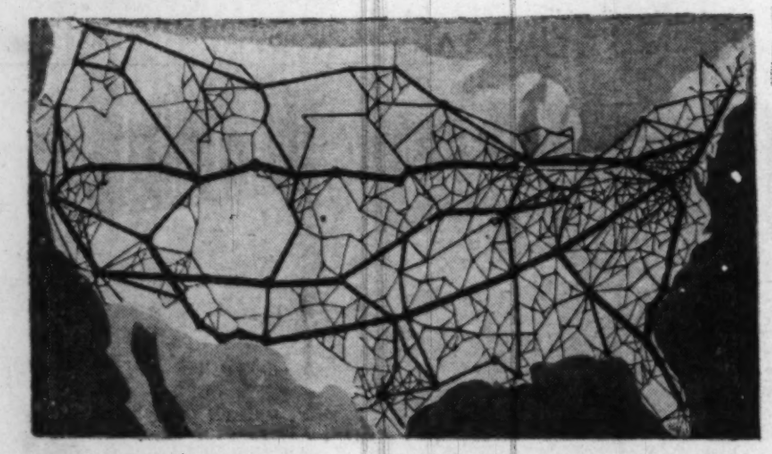




THIS WEEK THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE

Civil Aeronautics Administration

AND ITS PEOPLE WHO FOSTER AND DEVELOP AMERICAN AVIATION



Our sketch above indicates the more than thirty-seven thousand miles of Federal Airways crisscrossing the United States. Along these highways of the sky . . . traveled last year by more than fifteen million people . . . the CAA maintains the most modern types of radio and radar devices . . . hundreds of weather stations . . . providing American aviation with the most up-to-date airways system in the world.

All of the material contained herein has been secured from the Civil Aeronautics Administration and the Library of Congress.

Working constantly to guide American aviation forward are the fifteen thousand people of the Civil Aeronautics Administration . . . stationed throughout our country and the world. Theirs is a new profession . . . dedicated to the conquering of horizons . . . to the shrinking of our globe . . . to the binding together of nations and peoples . . . through their unceasing efforts to develop and foster the new science of flight by man. Helping to bring aviation out of its infancy . . . from the early days when airmen followed railroad tracks to their destinations . . . the workers of the CAA have rendered invaluable service to the aviation industry and to the people of our country. Their influence is far-flung . . . extending throughout the field of aviation, never ceasing in the quest for greater safety and efficiency in flying. Today . . . as one example of their work . . . our country is well on the way to possessing a truly national airport system . . . with the CAA lending financial and technical aid to local governments to construct adequate airport facilities across the land. Based on such a firm foundation, aviation will take further strides to assume even greater importance in our everday lives. Ours is the age of flight . . . of the conquering of distance. No place on earth is out of reach of the airplane . . . London, Paris, Shanghai or Capetown are only hours away by air. The Hecht Company takes pride in saluting the people of the Civil Aeronautics Administration . . . whose job is so important in the continuing advance of American aviation.

• The Civil Aeronautics Administration . . . has made many vital contributions to the safety and efficiency of flying. An outstanding recent achievement is the cross-wind landing gear, which permits safe landings even when the wind is blowing directly across the runway. This will make possible the construction of single-runway airfields . . . at a tremendous saving to the taxpayer.

• The Civil Aeronautics Administration . . . seeks to develop not only new and improved air techniques, but an air-minded citizenry. It trained more than four hundred thousand pilots during the five years of the Civilian Pilot Training Program . . . and has educated millions of youngsters in primary and secondary schools in the meaning of the air age. CAA publications and other information materials help spread aviation knowledge throughout the nation and the world.

• The Civil Aeronautics Administration . . . is recognized as the model for air safety standards the world over . . . many nations following our leadership. Every American airplane in use must meet the CAA's rigid requirements for safety . . . and today more than ninety thousand airplanes carry this certification. In addition to passing on the airworthiness of planes, the CAA examines all pilots for competence . . . and today some four hundred thousand men and women hold private, commercial or air transport licenses.

• The Civil Aeronautics Administration . . . stations employees in every section of the globe . . . on lonely islands in the Pacific . . . in the Aleutians . . . in Asia, Africa, Europe and South America . . . wherever United States civil aircraft fly.
